FRAUD CHARGED BY DEMOCRATS

MAY CONTEST ELECTION IN INDIANA.

CLAIM WHOLE STATE TICKET

BRYAN FIGURES ARE SMALL

Even in Oklahoma, Home of Bank Guaranty, Comoner's Majority Is Less Than Ten Thousand—Socialist Vote in That State Is 12,039.

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—Democratic State Chairman Stokes Jackson announced tonight that he will contest the election of any of the Republican state ticket, should the official returns, now being compiled at the secretary of state's office, show any of them to have been successful. The contest will be based on alleged naturalization frauds and other illegal methods. The Republicans concede the election of Thomas R. Marshall, Democratic candidate for governor, and that party's candidates for lieutenant governor and superintendent of public instruction, but claim the election of the rest of the Republican candidates.

Precincts Coming in Slowly.

CINCINATI, Nov. 7.—Gradually missing precincts in the Ohio election count have been reported, the official count, which begun yesterday, giving the complete count on several counties that had heretofore been only partially reported. The complete vote of Lucas county on governor came in late today, but the presidential total of that county is still missing. Montgomery is the other missing county, although some scattered figures have been received.

On presidential, a total of 4,171 precincts out of the 4,430 in Ohio report 526,452 votes for Taft and 466,063 for Bryan.

For governor, Montgomery county alone being missing as a whole, the returns from 4,285 precincts give Harmon, Dem., 518,622, against 506,720 for Harris. This would indicate pluralities for those two winning candidates close to the figures given by the Associated Press before midnight on election night. Nothing positive has been reported on the minor state offices, but so far, the Republicans seem to be leading.

TOPEKA, Kan., Nov. 7.—With only three counties, small ones in the western part of the state to be heard from the plurality of William H. Taft for President in Kansas is 34,788, and for Stubbs for governor is 32,096.

Bryan's Lead Slight.

GUTHRIE, Okla., Nov. 7.—Election returns from the different counties are coming in slowly to the state election board. Only 31 counties had reported when the board adjourned today. Forty counties gave Taft 60,423 and Bryan 65,049, a majority of 5,626 for Bryan in these counties. The Social-

NEW LIGHT THROWN ON ANNIS SHOOTING

BROTHER OF MAN WHO COMMITTED DEED TALKS.

T. J. Hains Declares They Were Not Looking for Victim When Tragedy Occurred.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Thornton Jenkins Hains in his cell in the Queens county jail today made a statement in which he gave additional details of the circumstances preceding and leading up to the murder of Wm. E. Annis by Capt. Peter C. Hains Jr. at Bayside, L. I.

Thornton Hains was present at the time of the shooting and is charged with having assisted his brother in the commission of the crime by holding off, at the point of a revolver, members of the Bayside Yacht club who had attempted to go to the assistance of Annis. Both brothers are under indictment for murder in the first degree.

While Thornton Hains, unshaven, collarless and with a strand of rope about his waist, doing duty for a belt, was relating his grim story, the captain, gaunt and unkempt, stood less than ten feet away, his long, monkish bath robe trailing the floor, his eyes staring fixedly at the white walls of his prison. He took no part in the conversation.

"There have been so many untruths circulated concerning Peter and myself," said Thornton Hains, "that I must ask the Associated Press to set us right in the eyes of the world. I am not a desperado and neither is Peter.

"On the day of the shooting I imagined Annis to be in Mount Vernon, [illegible] Peter and I had [illegible] that [illegible] would [illegible] at Bayside [illegible] night when my brother [illegible] his wrongdoing [illegible] been [illegible] General Hains [illegible] would kill himself [illegible] with [illegible] five, and [illegible]

MORSE HAS FEW CALLERS

His Wife and Attorney Only Ones to See Imprisoned Financier.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Charles W. Morse, the former financier who has been sentenced to 15 years in prison at hard labor, received only two visitors in his cell at the Tombs prison today, his wife and his lawyer, former Congressman Charles T. Littlefield.

Mrs. Morse, who was the first visitor, had some difficulty in getting into the prison, as she neglected to secure a pass. She was accompanied by her son, Harry. The warden finally permitted Mrs. Morse to see her husband, but he would not admit the son. Mr. Littlefield said on leaving the jail that no action to get Morse out of the Tombs can be taken until next Monday, when the order to show cause why bail should not be granted comes up. In the meantime, preparations are being made for a new trial.

SEEK TO PROTECT LIFE OF MINERS

GOVERNORS OF NINE STATES WILL HOLD CONFERENCE.

Hope to Secure Uniform Laws in Principal Mining Localties. Senators Will Assist.

PITTSBURG, Nov. 7.—For the purpose of securing uniform laws in the principal coal mining states of the country, for the protection of life and the prevention of waste, a conference of the governors of nine states has been called to meet in Pittsburg during the sessions of the American Mining congress, which opens its convention December 2.

The governors who have been asked to take part in the conference are: Charles S. Deneen, Illinois; Henry A. Buchtel, Colorado; Edward W. Hoch, Kansas; Joseph W. Folk, Missouri; J. Frank Hanly, Indiana; Andrew L. Harris, Ohio; Edwin S. Stuart, Pennsylvania; William O. Dawson, West Virginia, and A. E. Willson, Kentucky. In addition to these chief executives, several United States senators will also take part.

BIG GET-RICH-QUICK SCHEME UNCOVERED

G. W. EMANUEL & COMPANY SUSPECTED.

Two Arrests Already Made in Alleged Swindle in New York—Head of Firm Is Missing.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—That they have uncovered a great get-rich-quick swindle rivaling in magnitude that of the Storey Cotton company of Philadelphia, is the belief given expression tonight by postal authorities here, following a raid today upon offices of George W. Emanuel & Co., private bankers, on Fifth avenue. Two arrests were made by the local police, on complaint of the postoffice inspectors, Louis A. Prince and J. Walter La Barre being taken into custody and held for the action of the federal authorities. The postal officials are looking for Emanuel, the head of the firm, but said tonight they believe he had fled the country, probably having gone to Mexico.

Emanuel & Co. are accused of having used the mails to defraud by seeking to sell stock of a Mexican gold mine, which their literature is said to have represented as yielding a yearly return of 20 per cent to the investors, only [illegible] by an international banking house.

According to the postal authorities, 5,000 or more investors have remitted money to Emanuel & Co. to the amount of at least $500,000.

FOREST FIRE THREATENS

Small Village in Northern Illinois Threatened by Flames

CAIRO, Ill., Nov. 7.—Sandusky, a small village in the northern part of Alexander county, was threatened with destruction by forest fires today. One person, an aged negro, was burned to death in his cabin. The inhabitants of the village saved their homes by hard work, but a number of outlying farm houses and considerable corn was burned. The fires surrounded the village on all sides, but are thought to have burned themselves out.

PENNSYLVANIA BANK CLOSED

New Kensington Institution Suspends by Order of the Comptroller of the Currency.

NEW KENSINGTON, Pa., Nov. 7.—At the close of business today National Bank Examiner John B. Cunningham posted a notice on the door of the First National bank of this place that the institution had been closed by the order of the comptroller of the currency. The action of the banking authorities, it is said, was a surprise not only to the depositors, but to the officials of the concern.

At the time of its last statement the bank had $[illegible] in deposits. It was organized in 1893 with a capital of $50,000 and surplus of $10,000.

The directors will hold a conference tomorrow with Bank Examiner Cunningham. The board expressed that the bank will reopen next week.

OFFICE SEEKERS AFTER SHAFROTH

COMPLETE CHANGE EXPECTED

DEMOCRATS WILL [illegible] SUCCEED ALL REPUBLICANS.

FRIENDS SEEK RECOGNITION

Positions Commanding Both Large and Small Salaries Are Eagerly Sought—Personnel of All State Boards Will Probably Be Materially Changed.

DENVER, Nov. 7.—Governor-elect John F. Shafroth is a busy man just now, although it is two months before he takes his seat as chief magistrate of Colorado. For there are many offices to be filled after January 1, and applicants for appointment in department, as well as on boards of control of the various state institutions, are personally and through their friends already beginning to urge their claims and to proclaim their qualifications for the places.

It is taken for granted that it will be a clean sweep, and that the places now filled by Republicans are to be taken over by supporters of the Democratic party that now comes into complete and undisputed control of every department at the capitol, and of every institution in the state.

Some of the positions are considered desirable on account of the salary and the character of the work, and many are purely of a clerical nature affording a bare living. And yet the strife for the places that afford only a bare living to the incumbent are as eagerly sought and by fully as large a number of people as those which carry larger responsibilities and correspondingly more pay.

Hapy Changes.

The personnel of all the state boards will be materially changed. In many cases the new appointees constituting a majority. The governor who appoints the members is considered the most important factor. He is a member of about 26 different boards, some of them occupying much time to attend to the intricate duties.

This is particularly true of the land board and of the board of equalization. Both these boards, one conserving the interests of the schools in the lands set aside by the general government for the support of and promulgation of education, and the other fixing assessments on railroads and other corporations. Both these boards are composed of state officers, the land board being made up of the governor, the secretary of state, the attorney general and the superintendent of public instruction.

On the board of equalization are the governor, the state treasurer, auditor, secretary of state and attorney general. All these state officials being Democrats, a great shaking up is predicted, the most important changes being in the land department, where a large number of clerks are employed the year round.

Following are some of the appointments to be made by the new governor:

A private secretary at a salary of $1,500. The constitutional amendment submitted increased the salary to $2,500, but the amendment is doubtless defeated. Two clerks and stenogra-

"DAY OF THE BIG STICK IS OVER"

CHANCELLOR DAY THINKS WELL OF PRESIDENT-ELECT.

Thinks He Is a Great Piece of Ballast, and That He Will Steady Things—Likes Archbold.

BOSTON, Nov. 7.—In an interview tonight, Chancellor James R. Day of Syracuse university gave his opinion of William H. Taft and John D. Archbold. The chancellor is on board the steamer Cretic, now at this port, on her way from New York to Mediterranean ports.

Chancellor Day said:

"Now that Mr. Taft is elected, I do not expect to see the attacks of the present administration upon the business interests of the country. The day of the big stick is over.

"I expect Mr. Taft to steady things. I think he is a great piece of ballast. I expect to see the country come back quickly into rational conditions."

When the subject of Standard Oil letters, read during the campaign, was mentioned, the chancellor said:

"John D. Archbold is a remarkably liberal-minded man. I have many of his letters I wish I could make public. Some of them contain discussions of the labor question and the laboring men that are most wise in suggestions. The great trouble with the Standard Oil company is that it has been too close mouthed. I have told Mr. Archbold that such a policy was a mistake, and I think he has come to see that I was right."

DENVER STREET CAR STRIKES AN AUTO; THREE INJURED

Party En Route to Football Game Has Narrow Escape—No One Is Fatally Hurt.

DENVER, Nov. 7.—Five persons—three men and two women—had a narrow escape from sudden death this afternoon, when a Twenty-second avenue car struck an auto filled with people en route to the football game at Union park at Twenty-second and High streets. The two women in the back seat were the most seriously injured, but none of them will die.

The occupants of the car were: A. J. Sears, the driver, only slightly bruised; W. M. Olsen, an auto expert, slightly injured; E. G. Smith, uninjured; Mrs. George Walker, badly bruised about the face and body and may have suffered internal injuries. Mrs. Harper, sister of Mrs. Walker, also suffered severe injuries, but will recover.

According to reports of eye witnesses, Sears started to cross diagonally in front of the car at Twenty-second and High street. The car was coming down at a high rate of speed, without sounding the gong, so the occupants of the auto declare. Mr. Sears saw the approaching car and tried to avoid it by applying the brakes and steering diagonally across the track.

The motorman had no time to set the brakes and he caught the machine before it crossed the track. The automobile was dragged for 30 or 40 feet and the occupants turned over on to the pavement. The car was badly damaged.

NO POLITICS IN THE FORMER COMMISSION

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—Professor L. H. Bailey, dean of the agricultural department of Cornell, [illegible] head of the commission appointed by President Roosevelt to investigate farm life, and Gifford Pinchot, United States forester and chairman of the national conservation commission, were [illegible] speakers at a meeting here tonight of the American Academy of Political and Social Science. The farm and conservation [illegible] investigations [illegible] They will [illegible] College of [illegible] Maryland [illegible] to be studied. The [illegible] commission will travel [illegible] El Paso, Tex., where they will separate.

During the course [illegible] Professor Bailey said:

"The President's idea in appointing the farm commission was to establish a body to maintain our natural resources and [illegible] to [illegible] our natural wealth."

He added: "The commission, it has been said, was appointed for political purposes, that is, that the agricultural vote might be won for the [illegible] I wish to say in emphatic denial of this statement that the President had [illegible] in mind for [illegible] to the [illegible] and [illegible] appointment [illegible] said that a final [illegible] commission would [illegible] Washington on December 16, [illegible] report [illegible] probably be submitted to President Roosevelt. Mr. [illegible] part:

"The administration which is just drawing to a close will be remembered [illegible] achievements. The passage of the national irrigation act, the punishment of the great corporations which have long defied the laws, [illegible] the prevention of railroad rebating [illegible] the conservation of natural resources [illegible] runs through all of them a single thread which has been peculiarly an administration full of human feeling, full of sympathetic understanding of the position and point of view of the average man. The thread which runs through all of its varied work and all of its great results is that of a successful attempt to understand what the needs and rights of the average man are and then to get them for him."

PIERCE ON HIS WAY TO AUSTON TEXAS

WILL ANSWER CHARGE OF FALSE SWEARING.

Oil Man Declares He Has No Fear of the Outcome—Expects Release on Bonds.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 7.—H. Clay Pierce, chairman of the Waters-Pierce Oil company, left here tonight for Austin, Texas, where he will appear in court to answer to a charge of false swearing in the ouster suit of that state against his company. Mr. Pierce seemed entirely recovered from his recent illness in Massachusetts, and insured inquiries that he has no fear of the outcome of the Texas case. He was accompanied by Henry S. Priest, his attorney, who explained that there is no danger of a summary arrest of his client by Texas officers.

"Such a course would have no standing in court," said Mr. Priest.

"The mandate of the supreme court of the United States in the case has not been transmitted to the lower court officials, and the Texas county officials have no basis for action.

"Mr. Pierce is going to enter an appearance, and we expect to secure his release on bonds immediately."

TRUST FOUND IN TOBACCO WORKS

AMERICAN COMPANY ILLEGAL COMBINATION.

HAS VIOLATED ANTITRUST LAW

CONTROLLED WORLD'S TRADE

Power Over Foreign Markets Shown in Examinations to Have Been of Recent Origin—Receiver Refused on Ground That He Is Unnecessary.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—The contention of the government that the American Tobacco company is a trust, operating in restraint of trade and competition in violation of the Sherman antitrust law, was sustained today in decisions handed down by Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes, in the United States circuit court here. Judge Ward handed down a dissenting opinion.

In the suit, which was prosecuted by James C. McReynolds and Edwin P. Grosvenor, special assistants of the United States attorney general, the government asked for an injunction dissolving the combination. The government also asked the United States circuit court to appoint a receiver to wind up the affairs of the allied corporations.

Illegal Combination.

While finding that there was an illegal combination as charged, Judges Lacombe, Coxe and Noyes, in their opinion say that injunctions should issue against all the defendants except the United Cigar Stores company and the R. P. Richards Jr. company. The injunctions are however stayed pending an appeal to the United States supreme court. The petition asking for the appointment of a receiver was refused, as being "impracticable and wholly unnecessary."

The Imperial Tobacco company and the British-American Tobacco company, English corporations, were included in the government suit, but the complaints against these companies were dismissed.

The suit has been in progress for many months and great volumes of testimony were taken by the government and on behalf of the defendant companies.

Controlled Trade of World.

In the course of these examinations it developed that the American Tobacco company and its subsidiaries practically controlled the tobacco trade of the world. This control, so far as foreign markets is concerned, was shown [illegible] however, and came about through the formation of a working agreement with a great British corporation which had previously controlled the production and consumption not only in Europe, but in Asia [illegible]

The American Tobacco company was formed under the laws of New Jersey in 1904 when the old American Tobacco company, the Consolidated Tobacco company and the Continental Tobacco company were merged under a single head.

Under an agreement reached at that time, the parent company acquired the plants, factories, property and trade marks of all the component companies, and in addition to that, it now

CHICAGO IN LINE FOR A BIG BOOM

CHICAGO, Nov. 7.—Vice President Fairbanks was the principal speaker at the banquet of the Bankers club of Chicago in this city tonight. In discussing his subject, "The Panama Canal," Mr. Fairbanks said:

"Hand in hand with the construction of the Panama canal should go the improvement of our great rivers so as to insure an adequate stage of water and reasonable charges for the transportation of the products of our farms and factories over large areas. With the expansion of our productive power and the density of our population, it is necessary to increase the facilities for handling freight between the centers of production and consumption within our own borders and foreign ports.

"The recent adoption of a constitutional amendment by the people of Illinois empowering the legislature to authorize a bond issue of $20,000,000 for giving Chicago an outlet by a deep waterway to the Mississippi river, is an important and significant step, and we can indulge in the belief that in the course of a few years, upon the completion of this enterprise and the Panama canal, lumber and other products from the Pacific will be delivered at Chicago by an all-water route and that Chicago will, in short, enjoy many improvements and advantages of cheap transportation which are to flow from the completion of both of these great [illegible]."

SHOOTS WIFE, THEN SELF

New Yorker Insanely Jealous of Spouse From Whom He Separated.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Stephen Scott, 35 years of age, killed his wife Dorothy, 30 years of age, tonight by firing three shots into her heart. He then committed suicide by shooting himself in the head. Mrs. Scott had been twice married, her first husband having been David Harburger, son of Coroner Harburger, well known in local politics. Mr. and Mrs. Scott had been living apart for six months. Scott called to see his wife late tonight. She went to the door and without a word he drew his revolver and shot her three times and then killed himself.

ENTOMBED MINERS ARE FOUND DEAD

Four Shot Firers Lost in Benton, Ill., Mines, Burned Almost Beyond Recognition.

BENTON, Ill., Nov. 7.—The bodies of the four shot-firers who were killed and entombed in the Bend coal mine here Friday were recovered today. The corpses of Patrick Daily and Henry Stevens were found early in the morning, and late this afternoon the rescuers discovered the bodies of John Holmes and George Reed. All were burned almost beyond recognition.

The rescue work was hindered by fire, but the condition shows clearly that the accident was caused by a windy shot. The rescuers were compelled to build barricades to get to the men, but these same barricades will make possible an early resumption of work in the mines, and by Wednesday it is expected that coal will again be hoisted from the shaft.

ATTEMPT TO ROB TRAIN IS FOILED

One Seeks Escape by Mounting Top of Car, and Rolls Off, Probably Fatally Injured.

COLUMBUS, O., Nov. 7.—An attempt to rob Big Four train No. 35, from Cincinnati, due in Columbus at 9:55, was foiled tonight by the prompt discovery of the presence of two robbers on the dining car by a porter. As a result, one man, Harry G. Emmitt, aged 38, a pressman of 494 East Mound street, Columbus, is believed to be dying at Protestant hospital and a man who says his name is Patrick Mahem and that his home is in Cleveland, is held by the police as a suspect, pending identification by the dining car crew.

When the porter discovered the men he called the dining car conductor, Reese, who immediately tackled the two. He first grabbed Emmitt, who jerked out a small knife, cut the conductor across the hand and then made his way to the platform and climbed to the top of the car. As the speeding train made a sudden lurch near the Union station, he was thrown to the ground and is thought to have sustained a fractured skull.

Mahem was arrested later at the Davidson hotel, near the station. He admitted being on the train, but said he had been a regular passenger and was traveling from Springfield to Columbus.

The Curacao government has received an order to declare the port free for the import and export of weapons and ammunition, and it also announced that the government will in no way interfere with revolutionary movements.

RELIGIOUS WAVE DUE IN AMERICA

GREAT REVIVAL IS PREDICTED BY EVANGELISTS.

CHURCH IS LOSING ITS GRIP?

LACK OF ENTERPRISE IS GIVEN AS THE REASON.

MORAL WAVE IS SPREADING

Religious Workers Hope to Follow Up Temperance Campaign by a "March Against Sin"—Haskin Gives Interesting Evangelistic History.

By Frederic J. Haskin.

When Gypsy Smith, the English evangelist, led 15,000 persons through the streets of Washington at midnight on a "march against sin," he was quite as much rejoiced over the awakening of the church people as over the success of the assault on the devil. Revivalists and militant evangelists have an answer to the question, so much discussed by the pastors of American churches: "Why are the people drifting away from the church?" That answer is: "Because the churches lack enterprise and fail to give their people things to do."

If there is a characteristic peculiar to the social life of today it is expressed in the phrase, "Do it now!" This is an age of action. The people demand a man who does things, they want to do things themselves.

"Do It Now."

"Do it now!" cries Gypsy Smith, and 15,000 Washingtonians follow him on his "march against sin" into quarters of the city where they never expected to be. So it was in other cities where Gypsy Smith has been preaching. Action, strenuousity, doing, working—these are the things which make the preaching of this unlettered Romany Rye so marvelous.

Billy Sunday, the fastest base runner ever known to professional baseballdom, has been an evangelist for many years and is more popular and effective than ever before. Billy Sunday preaches the gospel just like he used to run bases, at a record-breaking pace.

These evangelists and their co-workers do not pretend that there is a great revival now in progress in the United States, but they hope to bring one about by preaching this gospel of action.

Australia was swept with a revival flame kindled by Torrey and Alexander, the two American evangelists who went out from the Moody Bible Institute in Chicago just ten years ago. Wales was literally transformed and transfigured by the revival spirit, which began at a Sunday night prayer meeting, and which found its greatest prophet in Evan Roberts, a twenty-six-year-old coal mine laborer who made 35,000 converts in the first year of his mission.

The efforts to bring about a great revival in America date from the Welsh revival of 1904. It was then

BONES OF SITTING BULL UNDISTURBED

Indian Superstitions Have Weight With White Men—Situation Delicate for a Time.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—The white undertakers from Saint Paul who have been moving the bones of dead Indians from Fort Yates, N. D., an abandoned military post, to Keokuk, Ia., will not disturb the remains of famous Sitting Bull, war chief of the Sioux, and an uprising of that tribe has been averted by the tactful handling of the situation by army officers and special agents of the Indian service. The remains of 14 braves have been transferred to Keokuk. The bones of those remaining will remain where they are, and the keen superstitions of the Indians has proven of such weight that the white men will not touch what is mortal of Sitting Bull.

A portion of the remaining tracts of the Sioux have suggested in negotiations which have been in progress for 10 days, that ultimately they allow that Sitting Bull's bones be transferred from Fort Yates to a spot on the Grand river in the heart of the ancient range of the Sioux, where the war chief was killed. The place where he fell has been marked by the Indians and is held to be sacred ground. The consent of all the Sioux will have to be obtained before this can be done, since the government's experience recently have convinced army officers that bloodshed will follow any action with reference to the remains of the chief, which does not meet the approval of the braves still living.

The Smithsonian Institution and the historical societies of both North and South Dakota have asked the government for the bones of Sitting Bull. No action will be taken on these requests in view of the recent [illegible] the Indians, who [illegible] interference will be [illegible]

$100,000 A YEAR FOR ADVERTISING

STATE OF MINNESOTA MAY APPROPRIATE THIS SUM.

Commercial Clubs Are Making Whirlwind Campaigns to Influence Legislation.

ST. PAUL, Minn., Nov. 7.—Backed by their state federation, the commercial clubs of Minnesota are making a whirlwind campaign for legislation which will permit the expenditure of $100,000 a year hereafter in advertising the state to the world at large. The movement has received energetic indorsement in every section of the state, and many members of the coming legislature, which will convene in four months, have volunteered their services in promoting the passage of the proper bills to give Minnesota a forceful and business-like campaign. The state is now engaged in advertising as a state controlled effort, but the appropriation is in the opinion of the commercial organizations, woefully small. There is every indication that the desired legislation will be readily adopted.

Interest in the project in the agricultural districts is keen. Minnesota has 84,000 square miles of fertile land of which only thirty-four per cent is under the plow. Its tourist attractions have never been advertised except in a purely local way, although the state has 10,000 lakes and Otter Tail county alone has 1,001 within its boundaries. In its far northern sections is the finest big game country in America for the sportsman, and canoe routes through a vast forest wilderness where a sportsman may travel for two months without making the same rivers and lakes twice, but these regions are comparatively unknown. The state federation of commercial clubs is making its campaign on the platform that Minnesota will become one of the great summer regions of the United States if properly advertised.

In order to take his mind off his troubles I took him out with me days at a time, cruising in a little motor boat I had."

Thornton Hains then told of his plan to buy a site along the water somewhere and this led him to Bayside.

"They have made much of the fact that we went armed," he continued.

"As far as Peter is concerned, I did not know he had a gun with him. It was not until after he had used it on Annis that I realized the situation. As for me, the gun I had was the same I carried for 14 years. Most of my life has been spent at sea, where primitive passions rule and where men in their cups heed more than words to subdue them.

"They have also said that when we arrived at the yacht club our first move was to ask where Annis was. There was never anything said further from the truth. We had not been on the ground long, however, before the name of Annis came to our ears. I immediately began to urge Peter to come away. He could not be persuaded, however, and after a while I gave up trying.

"It was so unexpected and it all happened so quickly that I was powerless to interfere. As soon as Annis came up to the float Peter opened fire. It was over in a second. A dozen men rushed for him and I saw the big boatman grab him by the throat and swing his fist to strike him. It was then I pulled my gun.

"I certainly had no feelings of affection for Annis, but I had saved him from being shot by Peter once before and I would have done so again if I had had the chance.

"The night that Peter's wife made the written acknowledgment of her misconduct with Annis, she asked that I get word to Annis of what had happened. Annis was expected at the fort the next day and she wished to warn him to stay away. She wrote the letter and gave it to me to mail. Peter had seen her give me the letter, however, and guessed to whom it was addressed. Before I could remonstrate with him he had torn it open and read its contents. It said: 'All is over between Peter and me. He knows everything. Don't come tomorrow.' Peter put the letter in his pocket and said:

"'I want him to come. I have something to say to him.'

"From his tone I knew that he meant to shoot Annis on sight.

"I determined that the only way to prevent a meeting between the two was to drug Peter. I went to Dr. Wilson, the post surgeon, and got him to give me a double dose of chloral. When we got back to the house I persuaded Peter to take it, keeping him in ignorance of what it was. When Annis came the next day Peter was still under the influence of the opiate. Annis saw Peter's wife and left again for New York. Twenty minutes after he had gone Peter awoke."

ANNAPOLIS, Nov. 7.—The report of the county grand jury, made public today, contains an echo of the fatal wreck on the Washington, Baltimore & Annapolis Electric railway on the night of June 5 last, when 10 persons were killed just outside of Annapolis. The higher officials of the railway company, including the general manager and the superintendent, are held to be equally negligent as the operator at Annapolis and the crew of the special car which collided with the regular through a mixup of orders.

GLEN FALLS, N. Y., Nov. 6.—The International Paper mills in this city and Fort Edward, which have been running on part time since the strike was inaugurated on August 1, will resume full operation Monday morning. Nearly all of the striking paper makers have applied for reinstatement.

TURIN, Nov. 7.—The Duke of the Abruzzi today received a cablegram from Miss Katherine Elkins, daughter of Senator Stephen B. Elkins of West Virginia, expressing her sympathy with him on the anniversary of the death of his mother. The duke's mother died November 8, 1876.

that the modern spirit of action was applied to religion. Corps of men on bicycles, volunteers, rode all day long over the country crying out to the people to come to church. Every modern method of advertising was used to attract the attention of the people. Noonday prayer meetings were held in the coal pits, thousands of feet under the ground. It was impossible for anybody to escape the knowledge of the fact that the evangelists were doing something.

So Gypsy Smith, Billy Sunday, Torrey and Alexander, and other noted evangelists learned a lesson in Wales. It is characteristic of them that they believe that the United States will soon experience another religious awakening, such as those of 1735, 1800 and 1858.

Rodney Smith, gypsy, fell under the influence of evangelism when a small boy. He lived with his father in the tents of the gypsies, he could neither read nor write, and his future seemed to be that of the ordinary roaming son of Romany. But his father was converted, and took the boy to hear Moody and Sankey. Soon young Rodney went to London and fell into the hands of William Booth, founder of the Salvation Army. Booth saw his earnestness and put him to work at preaching when he was 17 years old. He has been at it ever since—32 years. This is his sixth visit to the United States.

Sunday Was Baseball Player.

The Rev. William A. Sunday, 20 years ago was a member of the famous "White Stockings" baseball club of Chicago. One day he was sitting on the curb on Van Buren street with a group of baseball companions. From the windows of a mission opposite floated the words of an old-fashioned hymn. Sunday rose and walked over to the church, and from that moment he has been an evangelist. He discusses problems of the soul and religion in the slang of the day, forsaking the conventional King James' English which is used by nearly all "regular" preachers. Preachers are nearly always shocked by Billy Sunday, but they generally approve of him. Indeed, he will not hold a meeting in a city until after every evangelical minister in the town has signed an invitation for him to come.

Describing the temptation of Christ in the mountain, Billy Sunday says: "And the devil says to Jesus: 'Are you the Son of God?' And when Jesus says 'yes,' the devil comes right back at him, 'I'm from Missouri, you'll have to show me. Get busy with turning these rocks into bread and have a square meal.'" Very shocking, but Billy Sunday says it brings the picture to the minds of the people. And others say in his defense, that Jesus was upbraided for associating with publicans and sinners and speaking their simple language, that St. Paul was slangy in his day, and that it is all right for Billy Sunday to be slangy if he does things, despite the criticism of preachers who complain that their churches are empty.

Purpose Is to Do Good.

Leaving aside all question of religious dogma, and regardless of what one may believe, it must be admitted that the purpose of religious revivals is to do good, and that great revivals have left their impress upon the history of man. Abelard, St. Francis of Assisi, Wiclif, Luther, Savonarola, Whitefield, Wesley—all were revivalists. They did not agree as to doctrines, and the character of their missions differed widely. But they all got results. The great religious revivals of American history have reflected the changes of social conditions with unerring faithfulness. Jonathan Edwards led the first, beginning about 1735. He was a stern man, and his was the voice of one calling to conscience to awake to its duty. Duty was the keynote of the mission, but the effect was to break down narrow sectarianism in New England and to effect great reform in the habits of the people.

Wesley has been described as the man who joined conscience to rapture. His great revival so affected the lives of the English people that the ordinary conversation of the gentle-folk of the era is now wholly unfit for ears polite. Wesley's revival was an effort to induce men to be good in order that they might be happy. The Wesleyan mission had its effect in America as in England, and since his days profligacy has been looked upon with suspicion, if not with disapproval.

The "Great Revival."

The "Great Revival" which started in Kentucky and Tennessee in 1799 was a revival in which the preachers brought sinners to repentance by preaching a mixed gospel of salvation and damnation. But the damnation was the greater part and the element of fear was most potent. In the revival of 1858 which swept over the northern states there was a militant element—caused by the anti-slavery agitation. Each of these revivals succeeded in so far as the needs of the people of the time were recognized.

Church going may be on the decline in the United States, as so many preachers complain, but the evangelist still has his crowds. And if the influence of the church is on the wane, then there is another ethical influence taking its place. Ask a politician who has a prohibition sentiment in his bailiwick. He will not underestimate the so-called "moral wave."

It is this "moral wave," this awakening conscience," which is so evident in the world of politics, that the evangelists are seeking to turn into a great religious revival. And that is the underlying reason why Gypsy Smith was able to lead 15,000 good people of the city of Washington on a midnight "march against sin."

Originated in South.

"The Great Revival" is the name which will always belong to the remarkable religious uprising which originated in Tennessee and Kentucky at the end of the eighteenth century. The French revolution had profoundly affected the people of the American frontier. There were Jacobin societies in Nashville and Lexington, and it was fashionable to be an atheist. Churches were scoffed at, and there were no gods but horses, whisky and women. A large part of the population of both Kentucky and Tennessee at that time was made up of refugees from justice and all sorts of men who had been forced to flee the wrath of society in the older states.

In the year 1799 there was a remarkable influx of serious and earnest preachers, Presbyterians, Methodist and Baptist. Interest in religion was revived in a way, and there were notable meetings at Muddy River, Gaspar River, Flat Rock and a half dozen other places in both states. These were but precursors of the great revival which had its beginning at the Cane Ridge Presbyterian church in 1800. People came in wagons and on horseback from places in Ohio and Tennessee more than 200 miles distant. It was the first great camp-meeting. There were 20,000 people in camp, a great number for that day when Kentucky was the very outpost of civilization in the west.

"Stricken of the Lord."

The great feature of that revival was the "exercises" of the convicted and converted. People were thrown into the "jerks," their bodies being violently twisted and contorted. Others "danced" a sort of delirious dance. At one time at the Cane Ridge meeting there were 3,000 persons thus "stricken of the Lord." Whatever may be the explanation of the bodily "exercises" of the great revival, its influence was tremendous.

There are many persons, Gypsy Smith among them, who believe that there will soon be a revival in the United States which will be as great in this day as the Cane Ridge revival was in that day. And the motto of the modern evangelist is "Do It Now."

PONY COAT TRIMMED WITH LYNX.

There is more and more tendency to combine different furs, the long, fleshy sorts showing with extra effectiveness when side by side with the short-haired pelts. The coat of pony skin, very smart in its straight, tailored lines, is greatly enriched by the superb collar and revers of jack lynx. This ideal cold-weather costume is made perfect by the huge muff, also of black lynx, with paws and full brush suggesting the natural outline of the animal skin.

Not all the pony coats are mostly in blue ... though there are some in brown ... gray.

From the New York Times.

The sale of one rare coin, a specimen of which does not come into the market once in 25 years or more, will often result in causing another specimen to leave its hoarding place. With the exception of the specimen sold the other day, there is no record of a specimen of the rare "150 grain" Bechtler $5 gold piece having been offered at public sale since 1882, when one was disposed of at the sale of the collection of Charles I. Bushnell of New York city.

Only a day or two after the $5 piece struck at this North Carolina mine was sold for $785 a few days ago, T. L. Elder, who conducted the Wilson sale, came into the ownership of another specimen which had been preserved by a family of North Carolina as a sort of heirloom for many years, and this coin was promptly sold to a well-known collector for $775. With the discovery of the last-named piece a total of six of these costly gold pieces are known and located. Two pieces are in the collection of Virgil M. Brand of Chicago, who owns one of the finest collections of coins in the world, valued in the hundreds of thousands of dollars. A third specimen is the one owned by H. O. Granberg of Oshkosh, Wis., also the possessor of one of the most complete the possessor of one of the most complete collections of United States money of all kinds ever brought together. The fourth piece is contained by the Garrett collection now owned by Princeton university, while the fifth and sixth are in the mint collection at Philadelphia and the one last sold to a prominent collector here in the east.

No explanation of the reason of the scarcity of these $5 coins is advanced, unless it is that the majority of them have been remelted at the United States mint.

LABOR LEADERS TO GATHER IN SPRINGS

TO BE ROYALLY ENTERTAINED AT PRINTERS HOME.

The most notable gathering of labor leaders ever held in Colorado Springs will take place Wednesday when the chief executives of a majority of the international and national labor organizations of the national association and delegates to the national convention of the American Federation of Labor, which opens tomorrow in Denver, will be entertained by the International Typographical union at the Union Printers home. An elaborate program has been arranged, the International Typographical union having at the Boston meeting appropriated a large sum for the entertainment of the delegates.

The invitation will be formally extended tomorrow by James Lynch, president of the International Typographical union, who left Indianapolis Friday for Denver and Colorado Springs. Besides having President Lynch, the International Typographical union will be represented by its delegates, H. M. Stevenson of Toronto, Max S. Hayes of Cleveland, and T. W. McCullough, managing editor of the Omaha Bee.

In honor to the visitors from England, the British flag, for the first time in the history of the A. F. of L., will be festooned with the Stars and Stripes. The entire building will be elaborately decorated.

Coming in Special Train.

A special train of seven coaches over the Colorado & Southern will bring the visitors to Colorado Springs early Wednesday morning. They will be welcomed by executives of the International Typographical union, W. C. Whitthorne, president of the Federated Trades Council; Charles Deacon, superintendent of the Union Printers home; officials and members of the local labor organizations and other citizens.

After a tour of the city in automobiles and carriages, and trips to the various points of interest, the visitors will be escorted to the Union Printers home. A barbecue and band concert will be features of the entertainment. The barbecue will be in charge of Mark Raftry.

Among the noted labor leaders who will accept the hospitality of the International Typographical union in Colorado Springs are Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor; John Mitchell, former president of the United Mine Workers of America, now an executive of the Civic federation; Frank Morrison, secretary of the Federation of Labor; Will Huber, president of the Carpenters and Joiners union; Thomas Lennon, treasurer of the American Federation of Labor, and several hundred others of equal distinction.

A Most Valuable Agent.

The glycerine employed in Dr. Pierce's medicines greatly enhances the medicinal properties which it extracts from native medicinal roots and holds in solution much better than alcohol would. It also possesses medicinal properties of its own, being a valuable demulcent, nutritive, antiseptic and antiferment. It adds greatly to the efficacy of the Black Cherry-bark, Bloodroot, Golden Seal root, Stone root and Queen's root, contained in "Golden Medical Discovery" in subduing chronic, or lingering coughs, bronchial, throat and lung affections, for all of which these agents are recommended by standard medical authorities.

In all cases where there is a wasting away of flesh, loss of appetite, with weak stomach, as in the early stages of consumption, there can be no doubt that glycerine acts as a valuable nutritive and aids the Golden Seal root, Stone root, Queen's root and Black Cherrybark in promoting digestion and building up the flesh and strength, controlling the cough and bringing about a healthy condition of the whole system. Of course, it must not be expected to work miracles. It will not cure consumption except in its earlier stages. It will cure very severe, obstinate hang-on chronic coughs, bronchial and larryngeal troubles and chronic sore throat, with hoarseness. In acute coughs it is not so effective. It is in the lingering hang-on coughs, or those of long standing, even when accompanied by bleeding from lungs, that it has performed its most marvelous cures.

Prof. Finley Ellingwood, M. D., of Bennett Med. College, Chicago, says of glycerine:

"In dyspepsia it serves an excellent purpose, holding a fixed quantity of the peroxide of hydrogen in solution. It is one of the best manufactured products of the present time in its action upon enfeebled, dilatory, red stomachs, especially if there is ulceration or catarrhal gastritis (catarrhal inflammation of stomach). It is a most efficient preparation. Glycerine will relieve many cases of pyrosis (heartburn) and cures give gastric (stomach) acidity."

"Golden Medical Discovery" enriches and purifies the blood curing blotches, pimples, tumors, scrofulous swellings and sores or ulcers.

HAS HIS BACK BROKEN BY CAR

While trying to board a fast moving northbound freight train about 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon, William Easley, a colored coal miner, living on East Jefferson street, lost his hold and was struck in the back by a corner of the car behind, sustaining a broken back and several fractured ribs. He was removed in the ambulance to St. Francis hospital, and will probably not recover. He is in a semiconscious condition and is completely paralyzed from the back down. One rib on the right, and another on the left side, are fractured.

Easley tried to board the train in order to ride down town. He evidently lost his grip on the handle rail and was struck in the middle of the back by a corner of the car behind. He was tossed with terrific force a distance of several yards, and his ribs were fractured by the fall. He was removed to his home and thence to the hospital. He is married and is about 25 years of age.

EL PASO TO DECIDE ON HAGGOTT'S FATE

CONTEST AGAINST MARTIN EXTREMELY CLOSE.

Democrat Leads by 2,100 Outside of This County, Where 12 Precincts Are Still To Be Reported.

All Colorado awaits with interest the official count of the vote in El Paso county at the recent election, which will begin in the county clerk's office tomorrow, for on this count probably depends whether a Republican or Democrat will represent the Second congressional district in Congress at Washington.

Unofficial returns from the entire Second district, outside of this county, give John A. Martin, Democrat, a plurality of about 2,100 over Warren A. Haggott, Republican, and the complete official returns are not expected to change these figures material. In 49 of the 81 precincts in El Paso county, Taft has a plurality of 700 over

WARREN A. HAGGOTT.

Bryan, and McDonald has a plurality of 1,575 over Shafroth. Since Shafroth ran ahead of his ticket and McDonald slightly behind the Republican ticket all over the state, it is presumed that Haggott's plurality in these 49 precincts is about 1,900. In other words, with 12 precincts to hear from in this county, Haggott will have to gain the difference between Martin's outside plurality of 2,100 and his own El Paso county plurality of about 1,900. He must therefore gain 200 votes in 12 precincts. Judging from previous years, the Republican state ticket will easily run 300 or 400 ahead of the Democratic ticket in these 12 precincts, and Haggott will probably be elected, provided the official count does not materially change the returns quoted.

WOODMEN ARE RUSHING WORK

Big Reservoir Is Being Built and Other Extensive Improvements Made.

A reservoir to cost in the neighborhood of $10,000 is now being constructed by the Modern Woodmen of America on the site of its sanitarium, six miles north of this city, and three miles of pipe are being laid to connect the reservoir with the home buildings. The work is being done by day labor instead of by contract, and 25 teams and more than 100 men are at work. Another gang of workmen is busy getting coal on the site near the eastern limits of the Woodmen grounds, where it is expected that deposits will be found large enough to furnish all the fuel needed for the institution for years to come. The county commissioners have a force of men and teams at work on the road leading to the sanitarium from this city and from the county road to the grounds of the sanitarium. These roads will be put in first-class condition, so that the trip to the grounds will be in the nature of a pleasure trip for automobile parties.

The plans for the main buildings are being prepared in Rock Island, Ill., at the headquarters of the order, and will probably be ready for adoption by the building committee before the end of the year, after which work on the buildings will be started. The first colony of 60 tents will be completed by December 1 and immediately filled with patients.

R. TAYLOR DISTRICT MANAGER OF MUTUAL

LEAVES GAZETTE TO ENGAGE IN INSURANCE BUSINESS.

New Responsibility Comes as Reward for Faithful and Successful Work.

Ralph F. Taylor, for many years a member of the mechanical staff of The Gazette, has resigned his position so as to devote his time exclusively to life insurance work in the capacity of district manager for the Mutual Life Insurance company of New York. Mr. Taylor has represented the Mutual Life for several years, and has had much experience in the insurance business, in which he has been eminently successful. He is one of the best known and most popular young men of this city, and his appointment to the district managership of the company in El Paso and Teller counties and adjacent territory comes as a result of faithful and successful work.

Mr. Taylor will establish an office in this city in the near future.

TO PLAN FOR POULTRY SHOW

Meeting of Pikes Peak Association Tuesday Night Interesting Topic to Be Discussed.

The Pikes Peak Poultry association will hold its regular monthly meeting in the police court room of the city hall Tuesday evening. The topic for discussion will be the preparation of fowls for exhibition, particularly the washing, drying and manicuring of white ones.

Interest in poultry of the standard varieties was never greater than at this season, according to G. W. Weitz, secretary-treasurer of the local association. The new breed that is coming to the front is the White Orpington, originated less than 10 years ago at Orpington in England. This breed holds the world's record for high prices. Madame Paderewski recently purchased a pen of four hens and cockerel from a Kansas City breeder for $75.00. An offer from this lady of $5,000 for one hen, a famous prize winner, was refused, the owner regarding her as worth $10,000 to him.

Dr. A. C. Musgrave of this city has purchased a fine pen of this variety of Orpingtons from a leading Indiana fancier, and Dr. C. H. Grayson also has a pen from Kansas City, while several other local breeders are becoming interested and have expressed their intention of making the display of Orpingtons at the coming show of the Pikes Peak Poultry association, December 14-19, the best ever seen in Colorado.

Everybody interested in poultry is invited to attend the meeting Tuesday night.

CURES ECZEMA QUICKLY

New Drug, Poslam, Now Obtainable in Small Quantities.

Since its discovery one year ago, the new drug, poslam, has successfully cured thousands of chronic cases of eczema and other distressing afflictions. Heretofore poslam has been dispensed solely for the benefit of eczema patients, in large jars sufficient for a month's treatment. This was found to be an inconvenience to many thousands who use it for minor skin troubles, such as pimples, blackheads, herpes, acne, scaly scalp, complexion blemishes, itching feet, piles, etc., which require but a small quantity to cure. To overcome this, and in response to urgent appeals, the dispensers of poslam have been obliged to adopt, in addition to the regular two-dollar package, a special fifty-cent size, which in future may be found on sale at the Robinson Drug Co., Owl Drug Co., and other leading drug stores in Colorado Springs, or may be ordered direct from the Emergency Laboratories, No. 32 West 25th Street, New York City. In all eczema cases poslam stops itching with first application, and proceeds to heal immediately, chronic cases being cured in two weeks. In less serious skin troubles, results are seen after an overnight application.

Samples for experimental purposes may still be had, free of charge, by writing to the laboratories for them.

POLITICAL DRAMA SCORES HIT

"The Man of the Hour" Pleases Large Audience on Second Appearance in Colorado Springs.

George Broadhurst's political drama, "The Man of the Hour," the play which President Roosevelt terms as the best play he has ever seen, made its second appearance in this city last night at the Opera House before a very large house. The cast is practically the same as was seen last year, and the production is fully as good as before.

In writing "The Man of the Hour" George Broadhurst gave to the stage a picture of politics, of political machinery, bribery and graft, as it is worked in many cities. He opened a new field in play writing, which has eagerly been made use of by other writers since Broadhurst's sensational success. His characterizations are drawn with the sure hand of a man who knows the people he characterizes. His plot is well worked out, sustaining the suspense to the end of the play. His scenes are well brought about, and carry with them much dramatic strength.

The company which gave the play here last night was the same in the principal characters as was seen last year, with one exception. Felix Haney and Louis Hendricks are still giving their lifelike protrayals of the alderman and the boss. William Lamp is playing the mayor, and while he is better than last year's mayor, he fails to get all out of the part there is in it. This is especially true in the ... of the ... , where ... he ... so easily. His work carries more quiet, composed force than it does.

Ruby Bridges is admirable in the part of the girl the mayor loves, and her work in the climax of the third and fourth acts is worthy of especial mention.

Ethel Brandon plays the part of the mother of the mayor and in her big scene with him in the third act, where she learns that her husband was not the honest man she believed him to be, she is especially good, being natural and not over-acting the scene.

While the balance of the company was adequate, there is a noticeable letting down in the minor parts from the standard maintained in last year's production. The stage settings are appropriate throughout.

PIKES PEAK AND RETURN, $3.

The Cog road will make an excursion rate of $3.00 round trip, Sunday, November 8, and Monday, November 9. Train leaves Manitou at 9:25 a. m. and 1:30 p. m.

MAY CALL EXTRA SESSION

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 7.—Telegrams were today sent out from Governor Sheldon's office to members of the legislature asking expression of opinion on the advisability of calling an extra session of the legislature to so amend the present liquor laws of the state as to make state-wide prohibition possible, with the proviso that prohibitory law could be suspended in municipalities by a three-fifths vote.

If the replies indicate that a majority of the members will support such a measure, Governor Sheldon, it is stated, will call an extra session.

owns a majority of the stock of the American Cigar company and of the common stock of the American Snuff company, the Havana Tobacco company and the American Stogie company.

Export Business.

Under an agreement made in 1902 the vast export business of the American Tobacco company is conducted by the British-American Tobacco company, limited. This latter corporation has a capital stock of $30,000,000, two-thirds of which is owned by the American Tobacco company.

The American Tobacco company itself is capitalized at $180,000,000. Its president is James B. Duke, but Thomas F. Ryan, the banker and capitalist, has been regarded as the dominant force in the great corporation.

Since January, 1905, regular quarterly dividends at the rate of six per cent a year have been paid on the preferred stock. The first dividend on common stock was 2½ per cent, paid on March 1, 1905.

Big Dividends.

Since that time dividends in the same amount have been paid quarterly and in addition a 10 per cent extra dividend was paid in December, 1905; five per cent extra in September, 1906; seven and one-half per cent extra in December, 1906; five per cent extra in June, 1907, seven and one-half per cent extra in September, 1907, and two and one-half per cent extra last December. Extra dividends aggregating 15 per cent on the common stock have been paid thus far in the present year.

Judge Lacombe, in his decision, said: "There can be little doubt that the federal statute has been violated. Each one of the purchases of companies complained of in the petition was a contract and combination in restraint of competition existing when it was entered into, and that it is sufficient to bring it within the ban of this drastic statute."

TAFT NOT ALLOWED TO REST IN PEACE AT HOT SPRINGS

To Fulfill Promise of Long Standing, Must Speak in Brooklyn Next Saturday—In Need of Rest.

HOT SPRINGS, Va., Nov. 7.—President-elect Taft will not be able to enjoy his anticipated vacation undisturbed. He was reminded today that almost a year ago he promised to speak before the Prison Martyrs Monument association in Brooklyn. The date of the speech is next Saturday. Mr. Taft will leave Hot Springs Friday night and will return to his cottage here immediately after he has fulfilled his promise.

Frank H. Hitchcock, who has been chairman of the Republican national committee, will arrive tomorrow. The President-elect does not know what the chairman's visit may mean, but supposes that it is a winding up of the campaign in the way of a verbal report.

Mr. Taft said today that one of his chief pleasures in becoming President was the opportunity afforded him to aid the Philippines.

"I can't forget my first love," he said.

New York's Water Supply Project

The cut at the top shows how the aqueduct will form a syphon under the river. The map below shows the route of the New York aqueduct.

NEW YORK, Oct. 7.—The project of supplying pured drinking water to the city of New York is second only in magnitude to the great feat which Uncle Sam is so successfully carrying on at Panama.

The great ditch across the Isthmus will cost approximately $300,000,000, while the aqueduct which will carry the Esopus, Rondout, Schoharie and Catskill watersheds. The estimated daily yield of these sources is 660,000,000 gallons. The water will be conducted to the Ashokan dam, which will create the greatest artificial reservoir in the world. This dam is now under construction 85 miles from the center of New York city, and will cover an area river of drinking water 115 miles from the Catskill mountains to New York city, will cost approximately $162,000,000.

So much attention has been attracted to the Panama canal and to the great engineering problems in connection with the transportation tunnels under the Hudson that little is generally known regarding this immense undertaking of America's greatest metropolis.

The work is actually under way on this and has been for some time. It is estimated that water will be supplied to New York city from this source in about eight years. All of the outlay of $162,000,000 will be devoted to impounding and delivering the waters of of 14,000 acres. At its nearest point to New York it will be eight miles west of the Hudson at Kingston and will extend inland a distance of 13 miles, with an average width of nearly a mile. In area the reservoir will be nearly equivalent to that of Manhattan island. At some points it will have a depth of 190 feet, and the average depth will be 50 feet.

To make way for the reservoir, 64 miles of public roadway and 11 miles of railway will have to be discontinued. The huge dams which will confine the water will measure 220 feet from foundation to capstone, and will rise 610 feet above sea level. The length of the dams will aggregate three and three-quarter miles.

1st vote is 12,059. Those counties are believed to represent about three-fifths of the total vote cast and include most of the heavy Democratic counties.

WHEELING, W. Va., Nov. 7.—With the total vote for candidates for president and governor lacking in only four counties and with the majorities received from those, the final result of the elections in West Virginia has been reached.

For governor, Bennett, Dem., received 100,926 votes, and Glasscock, Republican, 112,805; Glasscock's plurality, 11,879; Dawson's plurality in 1904 was 8,921.

OMAHA, Neb., Nov. 7.—The petition of Wm. R. Hearst for transfer of the $600,000 damage suit of Governor Haskell of Oklahoma against him to the federal court was granted by Judge Estell of the district court of Douglas county last night and the papers were filed today with the clerk of the United States circuit court.

ONE HURT IN MIDNIGHT FIGHT

In a free-for-all fight at the Hong Kong restaurant, 112½ East Huerfano street, shortly before 1 o'clock this morning, Ray Mooney was painfully injured and, with Robert E. Hollerman, was arrested by the police while the disturbance was at its height. Two men, who it is claimed started the row, escaped before the arrival of the police. The interior of the restaurant presented a scene of wreckage when the police arrived. Chairs, tables, and furnishings used as weapons were thrown promiscuously about the room. The altercation is said to have started in a drunken dispute. Mooney and Hollerman, who are said to have been on the defensive, were the only belligerents on the scene when the police alarm was turned in. Both were taken to the police station. Mooney received deep cuts in the face and is severely bruised.

LONDON, Nov. 7.—The October statement of the board of trade shows decreases of $44,585,000 in imports and $26,550,000 in exports. The decrease in exports includes $10,000,000 in food and $15,000,000 in raw material. In exports the decrease is in manufactured goods and comprises $150,000,000 in cotton and wool textiles.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 7.—President Roosevelt today selected Job E. Hedges of New York as assistant treasurer of the United States at New York, to succeed Hamilton Fish, who resigned the office to become a candidate for Congress. It is understood that Mr. Hedges has signified his willingness to accept the position.

Even lingerie has caught the directoire enthusiasm.

THE REAL THING IN PUMPKINS

From the New York Tribune.

"Yankees think they know all about pumpkins because they invented the pumpkin pie, but to see the real thing as a commercial article you must come to the Hoosier state," writes a commercial traveler from Indiana. He speaks of a packing concern in Indianapolis where pumpkins are at present of great importance. They are received in large quantities there from all parts of the state for shipment to the market and for canning, and 40 carloads a day are not an extraordinary quantity. You can't quite realize what a carload of pumpkins is till you reduce it to pies, and one is struck with awe when informed that 40 carloads will make about 2,000,000," writes the drummer. "A carload, they tell me, weighs about 25 tons. Of course that would be too much for one day's baking, so the pumpkins are canned, and each ton fills 250 cans, and three regulation-sized pies can be made out of the contents of one can. I saw a 40-car consignment that had been dumped into the packing concern's yard—2,000,000 incipient pies, as it were—and when a man who stood neck deep among the yellow giants said: 'Quite some pumpkins,' I echoed, 'Quite some!'"

SALT LAKE CITY, Nov. 7.—The supreme court of Utah today handed down a decision in a case in which the validity of the law imposing a tax license on corporations doing business in this state was attacked. The court upheld the constitutionality of the statute.

Making Good Makes Friends

There is no way of making lasting friends like "Making Good"; and Dr. Pierce's medicines well exemplify this, and their friends, after more than two decades of popularity are numbered by the hundreds of thousands. They have "made good" and they have not made drunkards.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It still enjoys an immense sale, while most of the preparations that came into prominence in the earlier period of its popularity have "gone by the board" and are never more heard of. There must be some reason for this long-time popularity and that is to be found in its superior merits. When once given a fair trial for weak stomach, or for liver and blood affections, its superior curative qualities are soon manifest; hence it has survived and grown in popular favor, while scores of less meritorious articles have suddenly flashed into favor for a brief period and then been as soon forgotten.

For a torpid liver with its attendant indigestion, dyspepsia, headache, perhaps dizziness, foul breath, nasty coated tongue, with bitter taste, loss of appetite, with distress after eating, nervousness and debility, nothing is as good as Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

It's an honest, square-deal medicine with all its ingredients printed on bottle-wrapper—no secret, no hocus-pocus humbug, therefore don't accept a substitute that the dealer may make a little bigger profit. Insist on your right to have what you call for. Don't buy

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription

Expecting it to prove a "cure-all." It is only advised for woman's special ailments.

It makes weak women strong, sick women well. Less advertised than some preparations sold for like purposes, its sterling curative virtues still maintain its position in the front ranks, where it stood over two decades ago.

As an invigorating tonic and strengthening nervine it is unequaled. It won't satisfy those who want "booze," for there is not a drop of alcohol in it.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets, the original Little Liver Pills, although the first pill of their kind in the market, still lead, and when once tried are ever afterwards in favor. Easy to take as candy. They regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

FOR GOOD CITIZENSHIP

Independent Organization Formed by Members of C. E. Union.

The young people of the city are taking an enthusiastic stand for good citizenship and as a result have formed an entirely independent organization, although it is indirectly connected with the Colorado Springs Christian Endeavor union.

On October 11 a mass meeting was called by H. E. Chapman, chairman of the Christian Citizenship committee, and as a result the young people voted unanimously to organize a citizenship union. H. S. Fairchild, Mark Skinner and Professor O. F. Dubach were appointed a committee to draw up a constitution. The committee reported at a meeting on November 1. A committee on nominations was appointed to report at a meeting at the First Baptist church Tuesday evening at 7:30 o'clock. The organization has a large membership.

Beauty and Bad Breath

Cannot Go Together, No Matter How Woman May Try to Make Them

It does not matter how beautiful a woman may be, if she is afflicted with bad breath she will be shunned and pitied by men, and even women will studiously avoid her

If any woman doubts this statement let her make a point of asking a friend in whom she may confide, a man friend or relative If he be honest, he will tell her that foul breath from the mouth of a woman will drive men from her more rapidly than any other personal affliction

Foul breath arouses in man disgust, and where this quality is brought into play, no amount of self-denial or reasoning can overcome the natural repugnance which comes to man when he is in company with such a woman."

What is true of bad breath in woman is not true in so great a degree in men. Women are looked upon as the incarnation of sweetness, breeding virtue and refinement Foul breath will sicken a man so that he cannot feel for such a woman a companionship necessary to make him desire to be in her company

There is absolutely no occasion for bad breath in either men or women Charcoal, the strongest absorbent known, when taken into the stomach will prevent this repugnant tendency or affliction

Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges are sold in tremendous quantities all over America and Canada They cure and have cured all forms of bad breath A single box will convince you of this fact One should eat some of these lozenges after each meal and upon retiring You might eat fifty of them without harm They are not medicine but pure willow charcoal, mixed with sweet honey to make them palatable, and compressed into a lozenge to preserve their peculiar and lasting strength

The next time you wish to go into company and don't want your foul breath to humiliate you, eat several of Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges, and your breath will be pure and sweet

Every druggist carries them price 25 cents, or send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail free Address F A Stuart Co, 200 Stuart Bldg, Marshall Mich

Manitou News

The paying of election wagers was the order of the day during the latter part of the week. On a wager that Bryan would carry El Paso county, Albert Carson lost and had to haul John Lotz in a wheelbarrow for a distance of two blocks up hill and return. Mr. Carson, who was overconfident of Bryan's victory, also made a wager with Donald Ogilbee on the state of Colorado. Mr Ogilbee lost and had to roll a peanut the distance of a block with a match. This was amusing to many people, but the loser was game and completed the task as agreed.

Last Tuesday evening was the regular time for the meeting of the city council, but as it was election day, adjournment was taken until yesterday. An emergency appropriation ordinance calling for an additional appropriation of $3,500 over the regular ordinance of last spring, was presented and passed, the money to be used for repairing streets and laying new water mains When the regular appropriation was made last spring it was much less than that of the year previous, so the additional amount will be about 23 mills the same as in former years An ordinance, calling for a uniform construction of sidewalks over town, was introduced and will be passed at a future meeting The police magistrate reported the collection of $27 50 in fines during the month of October.

Yesterday morning, on the Manitou grounds, the Manitou High School football team defeated the West Side team of Colorado Springs by a score of 10 to 4 The game was interesting and abounded in good plays. Next Saturday the locals will play the second High School team of Colorado Springs.

TERRORS DEFEAT CUTLER ACADEMY

SCORE 21 TO 2 IN SOMEWHAT RAGGED GAME.

Cheese Makes Brilliant Runs In First Half and Gains 16 Points. Second Half Is Close.

The High School Terrors yesterday defeated Cutler Academy by a score of 21 to 2. The contest was not an especially brilliant one, the play being marred by frequent fumbles on both sides and delays for injuries and wranglings over interpretation of the rules. Sixteen of the Terrors' points came in the first half on two brilliant runs by Halfback Cheese the first for 65 yards and the second for 20. Morris annexed the other four points by a clever placekick from the 35 yard line. Three times in the first half Hoover of the Academy tried for a Princeton, but the distance was too great each time and he was unable to score.

In the second half the Cutler team came back stronger and once missed a touchdown by a narrow margin. A blocked punt on the High School's five-yard line bounded back across the goal line and was recovered by Friend, giving the Academy a safety, their only score of the game.

For the Terrors Halfbacks Cheese and Morris played the strongest game. Both were strong at carrying the ball and Cheese proved a match for Johnson the clever Academy punter. R. Wilson and Friend, the tackles, showed up well on defensive work. Captain Randolph was strong in returning punts, but did not run his team with their usual speed. Thosteson of the Academy played his usual strong game but was handicapped by injuries received early in the game. Taylor at tackle, was the best man in the line, breaking through the Terror line repeatedly.

How It Was Done.

Captain Randolph won the toss and chose to defend the south goal. On the first play Cheese got away for 20 yards on a fake punt, but fumbled and Cutler tried three Princetons, holding the ball for 5 minutes. The Terrors, regaining possession of the ball, advanced it 30 yards on crosstackle plays but were penalized. Again regaining the ball Cheese, on a crosstackle play got away for 65 yards and a touchdown. Morris kicked goal.

The Terrors kicked off and recovering the ball on a fumble Morris dropped back and kicked a pretty Princeton from the 35-yard line. The Terrors again kicked off, but regaining the ball on a punt, rushed it across with a series of crosstackle plays, Cheese scoring. Morris again kicked goal. Shortly after the kickoff time was called for end of the half.

The Second Half.

The second half proved a closer contest. Each team punted frequently, the Terrors gaining on the exchange. Forward passes were tried frequently with only fair success. On a series of end runs the Terrors carried the ball to the 30 yard line, where a short kick recovered by Friend on the four-yard line, again gave the Terrors their opportunity and again Cheese scored, Morris kicking an easy goal. Score Terrors 21, Cutler, 2.

The High School received the kick but lost 15 yards on a fumbled forward pass. On the next play Taylor broke through and blocked the punt, giving Cutler a safety. Stovell replaced Morris and a few minutes later Barnes replaced Cheese. The ball sea-sawed across the field the remainder of the game, neither goal being in danger.

The lineup was:

CARLISLE SUFFERS DEFEAT BY HARVARD

INDIANS BADLY BEATEN BY CRIMSON ELEVEN.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 7.—Harvard proved irresistible against the Carlisle Indians today both in the attack and on the defense, and won, to the surprise of nearly 20,000 spectators, by a score of 17 to 0.

The result would have been several points larger for the Crimson, had it not been for the overeagerness of the Harvard players when within reaching distance of the Indian goal line.

Several times Harvard was on Carlisle's five-yard line, and three times was sent back for offside play and holding, while in the fourth instance her players became exhausted from rushing and the Indians got the ball on downs. Two minutes later Harvard was within 12 yards of the Indian goal line, but again lost the ball on downs. It was directly after this that the strength of the Crimson defense was tested to the very limit and proved unbreakable, for the Indians were held for downs on the Crimson five-yard line. Then came the attack which covered practically the entire length of the field and which resulted in the third Crimson score. These plays were all in the second half.

In the first half, Harvard scored twice, the first march to the Indian goal line starting from the Crimson's 35-yard line, and the second from the middle of the field. Twice during the game the Indians looked dangerous. The first time a 20-yard penalty stopped their progress under the Harvard goal posts, and the second time the adamantine defense by the Crimson stopped further progress. Balenti's only attempt at a field goal was smothered almost before the ball left the ground. One Harvard man, Kennard, was ordered from the field for rough play.

The beauty of the modernized football was shown ably by Harvard. Three forward passes by the Crimson resulted in long gains and two onside kicks were carried off successfully. It was the Crimson's smashing onslaught into the Indian line, however, that gained so many yards for Harvard and proved the feature of the game. The longest run of the game was that by Cutting around Carlisle's left end, which netted 47 yards. White made a run through center of 28 yards and Corbett 24 yards in his run for a touchdown in the first half.

After the loss of Kennard, Harvard was woefully weak in the kicking department and Carlisle's chance at the Crimson goal was due partly to McKay's inability to boot the ball out of danger.

The first score came after 14 minutes of play. The ball had been going back and forth across the field and penalties on both sides had been frequent. At last Harvard captured the ball on the Crimson 35-yard line. Four rushes into the line brought it to the center of the field and an onside kick took it to the Indians' 24-yard line, from which point Corbett carried it over.

Then came the first chance of the Indians to score. Getting the jump on the Harvard players and aided by a well-executed forward pass, Carlisle pushed the ball to within striking distance of the Crimson goal but a 20-yard penalty pushed the ball back and soon afterward Harvard got the ball on downs. Then followed Harvard's second score, in which a forward pass and the onside kick were contributing factors. Five minutes before the close of the game after the Indians exhausted themselves there came the great Crimson rally which covered the length of the field and which resulted in the third and final score. A review of the work of the two teams shows that Harvard rushed 448 yards in 92 scrimmages, had 20 first downs, kicked nine times from downs for a distance of 298 yards and suffered seven penalties for a loss of 125 yards. The Indians covered 102 yards in 39 scrimmages, had four first downs, kicked eight times for a distance of 362 yards and were penalized four times for a distance of 35 yards.

D. U. DEFEATS THE SCHOOL OF MINES

WINS BY DECISIVE SCORE OF 18 TO 0.

Denver Outplays the Mines in Every Department of the Game. Police Called On to Stop Fight.

DENVER, Nov. 7.—The University of Denver defeated the Golden School of Mines 18 to 0, before 7,000 people at Union park, this afternoon.

Denver outplayed the Mines in every department, although the latter played a good defensive game until the Denver men got warmed up. During the intermission between the two halves, an argument between the Golden cheermaster and several D. U. students on the field resulted in a little fight, which the police were called on to stop. Sergeant Sturgis, with four officers, rushed into the crowd and used their clubs freely on the students. Several college men were removed from the field. No injuries were reported as a result of the fight or the police clubbing.

Result a Surprise.

The result of the game was a great surprise to the followers of football in Colorado. Many of them, especially those connected with Denver university, expected the preachers to play a stubborn game, and some even expected them to win, but no one hoped for so decisive a victory.

The fact is however that Denver outplayed the Miners in almost all departments of the game, and deserved to win, although the large score does not accurately tell the comparative strength of the teams. Denver was in vastly better condition than the visitors on account of the fact that the latter returned only four days ago from a long and tiresome trip to the Pacific coast. Denver however deserves all credit for hanging it on the Miners, three-time champions of Colorado, for there is no denying the fact that Buchtel's pets were on their metal and ready to take advantage of all of the Miners mistakes as well as to play a strong snappy game.

Denver's touchdown came after 20 minutes play in the first half. After the ball had passed back and forth from one side to the other in the center of the field, Schrader punted to Brooks who fumbled. Volk of Denver recovered the ball on the Mines four yard line and on the second line buck the husky Schrader carried it over for a touchdown, after which he kicked goal easily, making the score 6 to 0.

In Rapid-Fire Order.

It was not until the last five minutes of fierce playing, in which honors were about even and during which the Denver goal was threatened several times that the next touchdown was made. This was followed in rapid fire order by another which came just before the officials called time. Fumbles or bad judgment on the part of the Mines figured in both of these scores although it required mighty line plunging and good head work to carry the ball over after it had been recovered by Denver within striking distance of the Mines goal.

Denver		Mines
Russ	le	Gilbert
Volk	lt	Neil
Mc...	lg	Evans
Wirgender	c	...
Potter	rg	Cavanaugh
Lieber...	rt	Kruger
Hatrel	re	Skinner

The officials were:

BANKER BITTEN BY BEAR

From the New York American.

Charles Dewar Simons, a banker at 76 Wall street and brother-in-law of E. H. Harriman, was ferociously attacked by one of the three black Alaskan bears owned by Mr. Harriman and kept in a huge cage upon his estate at Arden, Orange county, N. Y.

Mr. Simons was attacked while in the act of feeding the bears. The largest of the bears, which has displayed an ugly disposition of late, seized his right hand in its teeth, cruelly lacerating it. The brute had to be beaten off by the keeper before it would let go, and was only overcome by heroic efforts on the part of the keeper.

This is the second attack made by this bear within the past week. The first was upon Keeper Lloyd's assistant, who was inside the cage. The bear suddenly sprang at him, standing upon its hind legs, growling fiercely and showing its teeth. The assistant keeper saved himself only by beating the animal over the head with a shovel.

Mr. Simons' villa is a short distance from the cage which contains the bears. He has been in the habit of feeding the animals bits of sugar and nuts every morning.

The bears have grown very tame since they were placed in the cage as cubs about three years ago. Even children have fed them nuts out of their own hands.

The attack on Mr. Simons was very sudden. He had passed his hand through the bars of the cage to feed the younger of the three when the older bear, a male, sprang at his hand, grasping it between its claws. Before Mr. Simons could withdraw his hand the bear had seized it with its teeth, burying them in the flesh.

Mr. Harriman's "three iceberg twins," as they are called by the villagers, have long been an attraction at Arden. Visitors from all the surrounding country flock to see them, and they have thrived on peanuts and candy.

DUNKIRK, N. Y., Nov. 7.—The Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad has placed an order for 30 engines to be built at the Brooks Locomotive works.

YALE AND BROWN PLAY A TIE GAME

OLD ELI ALL BUT LOSES CONTEST NEAR CLOSE.

For Second Time in History of Institution the Game Is Played, Result Is Surprise.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 7.—For the second time in the history of the football relations between the universities, Brown played a tie game with Yale today, the score being 10 to 10. The other game occurred in 1895, and ended 6 to 6. The visitors outplayed Yale in practically every department of the game, except that of kicking, and but for carelessness in catching a punt out from Yale's goal line in the second half and for holding in the line just before the close of the contest would undoubtedly have won the game.

Brown's first score came quickly after the opening of the first half. Hobbs kicked off for Yale. Brown rushed it down to the 40-yard line. McKay and Mayhew carried it 25 yards more. Sprackling passed it forward to Dennie and the latter carried it over for a touchdown. McKay failed to kick goal. Five minutes later after Brides and Coy had rushed the ball down to Brown's 25-yard line and Brown had held Yale for a second down, Coy kicked the first goal from the field. In the second half, Johnson replaced Murphy at quarterback on the Yale eleven. Following the kickoff runs by Coy brought the ball back to the center of the field, and then Yale scored on a forward pass, the first from Philbin to Logan for 25 yards and the second from Johnson to Haines who took the ball over the line. Hobbs kicked the goal. Two minutes later Dennie intercepted a forward pass from Philbin to Haines ran 30 yards and crossed Yale's goal line. There was no goal kicked as when the ball was punted leisurely out to Sprackling he allowed it to just touch the ground. In the last minute of play McKay ran 40 yards for a touchdown but it was not allowed, as there had been holding in the line.

HAS FINGERS AND TOES TO SPARE

Wall (S. D.) Dispatch to the New York World.

When it was announced in the Wall Record that a boy baby with six fingers on each hand and six toes on each foot had been born to Colonel and Mrs. Weatherby of this place the colonel was filled with a pride uncommon even among new fathers. Colonel Weatherby by himself has six well-developed fingers on his left hand and six toes on each foot. He says that extra fingers and toes can be found in his family for five generations back.

"But," says the colonel, "this baby is what I call normal. He is the first one of the family to have two sets of six. Now that he is balanced all around he makes rather a fit youngster.

"I am expecting great things of the boy especially if he has any musical talent. Think what he would do on the harp with 12 fingers, for example. Why, he would discover harmonies never before known to the world. I am not much on music, but even if I had been, with five fingers on one hand and six on the other I would get some of the notes crossed.

"Or if the boy doesn't take to music, wouldn't he shine on a typewriter, or one of these printing machines that look like a typewriter and spit out sticks of type? I tell you, watch my boy Jim."

Ribbons in satin and velvet apparently will have a great vogue in winter millinery.

PENNSYLVANIA EASY WINNER

Takes Game From Lafayette by Score of 34 to 4. Forward Pass Is Used Continually.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 7.—The University of Pennsylvania football team overwhelmed Lafayette this afternoon by a score of 34 to 4, in an unexpectedly easy game. With the exception of the one time that they scored, the visitors did not menace Pennsylvania's goal. Lafayette's score, which was the result of a goal from placement, was made before Pennsylvania had registered a single point.

The Pennsylvania team immediately braced and carried the ball half the length of the field for a touchdown, Hollenback carrying the leather over the line. The same player scored two more touchdowns in this half.

In the second half, the Pennsylvania team resorted to the running game, using the forward pass continually.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 7.—Much to the surprise of the gallery, Douglass Grant of Richmond, England, who was regarded as a sure winner of the first prize in the Atlantic City Country club's golf tournament, was defeated in the final round this afternoon by Robert Hayne of Yale. Grant defeated Walter Smedley of Philadelphia in the semi-final, and Hayne beat W. E. Shackelford of Atlantic City.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 7.—The Yale Gun club defeated the Harvard Gun club here this afternoon in the annual dual shoot, by a score of 224 to 223. The best record was made by Captain J. R. Gilman of Harvard, who shot 49 out of a possible 50.

EISELE WINS 10-MILE RUN

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—John T. Eisele a Princeton graduate sporting the colors of the New York Athletic club won the national 10-mile running championship of the Amateur Athletic union of the United States at Celtic park, Long Island City, today. There were 32 competitors, several of whom were members of the American Olympic team. Eisele won today's event in 53 minutes 16 1-5 seconds.

The American record for this distance—52 minutes 38 2-5 seconds—was made by the late Willie Day at Staten Island October 26 1889 and Eisele's time is the best that has been recorded for this event since that year. W. Bailey of the New York Athletic club finished second, and George Bonhag of the Irish-American Athletic club, third.

James J. Lee of the Boston Athletic association finished fourth. He led the field at a heart-breaking pace for seven miles, but collapsed after he had finished and had to be carried to the club house. He revived quickly. Fifteen men finished within the 58-minute time limit, and each received a medal.

BERKLEY, Cal., Nov. 7.—California "Varsity Rugby" team defeated the University team this afternoon by a score of 11 to 0. The Nevadans played a magnificent game, and just at the close came within an ace of scoring on a pretty passing rush. California scored two tries in the first half, converting one, and one try in the second.

DARTMOUTH WINS FROM PRINCETON

IT WAS ANYBODY'S GAME TILL WHISTLE BLEW.

New Jersey Team Suffers First Defeat of Season—Game Is Played in New York City.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7.—Before a wildly-cheering crowd that packed the Polo grounds, Dartmouth's football team gave Princeton its first defeat of the season today, scoring 10 points to their opponent's six. It was anybody's game until the final whistle blew, although the men from Hanover exhibited the more consistent ball. Pishon, the tiny quarterback—he weighs but 126 pounds—played brilliantly. In addition, he directed his team with excellent judgment. His forward passing brought about a winning score. Buckingham's short punt had given Dartmouth the ball on Princeton's 30-yard line. Pishon then called for a forward pass and hurled the ball cleanly to Schildmiller who dashed across the goal. Immediately before, at the opening of the second half, Princeton secured the ball on Dartmouth's 40-yard line on a holding penalty. Successive line plunges carried the leather over and Walter kicked goal.

Dartmouth's other score came in the first half. The ball had zigzagged back and forth without either side gaining a decided advantage, when Hanley finally got away on a 40-yard run around Princeton's left end bringing the leather to the New Jersey men's 32-yard line. A few moments later Sherwin fell back for a drop kick. The angle was difficult, but he booted the pigskin squarely between the posts.

On the whole Dartmouth's victory was clean cut and Princeton is more than ever worried over the Yale game next Saturday. There were 15 substitutes, three men—Marks, Sparks and Welch—being taken out for injuries.

THE DOCTOR AND HIS FEE.

Ability to Pay Defended as the Limit of Charge.

From the New York World.

Said Satan in the course of his remarks on the probable vulnerability of Job: "Skin for skin, yea all that a man hath will he give for his life." This was an early contribution to the literature of debate over the proper size of the doctor's fee. Its latest product is a chapter in the North American Review by Dr. Arthur C. Heffenger, who argues that the fee may be fixed justly by considering what life or limb may be worth to a particular patient.

Another authority has stated the case in epigram: "Medical and surgical services have no value, in that they are invaluable."

Once a New York polo player paid $1,000 for having a broken finger set. He was rich and he wanted to be sure of the finger. In the case of Lolita Armour, Dr. Adolf Lorenz, coming from Austria to Chicago, received $75,000—a small price for the physical well-being of the petted child of a multimillionaire. A Boston man paid gladly $10,000 for laparotomy performed on his wife. There are men like James R. Keene and the late Cornelius Vanderbilt who think nothing of engaging while traveling the exclusive services of a doctor who can earn $25,000 a year in practice.

On the other hand it is stated that practically 33 per cent of the practice of New York city is charity—and in at least a third of such cases the doctor is imposed upon.

There are about 200,000 doctors in the United States, or one to every 400 of population. The average yearly income in the profession is estimated at $750. A few doctors make princely incomes, many approach the other extreme. There are great and good physicians who are not famous nor rich and there are charlatans who are notorious and wealthy.

LENOX WOMEN FIGHT FIRE

Lenox (Mass.) Dispatch to the New York Tribune.

Fire which broke out in S. W. Tillotson's stables Sunday afternoon threatened to sweep the village and was quelled only through the assistance of the women and children who shoveled gravel into the flames and wrung out blankets in water for the firemen. Owing to the drought the high-pressure water supply failed and the firemen were unable to cope with the fire at the time the women and children came to the rescue. The fire was quelled in half an hour.

ILLITERACY AND CRIME

From the New York Tribune.

The official report of the prison population in England remarks on the fact that many of the young boys convicted of crime were unemployed at the time the offense was committed and had been unemployed except at rare intervals since leaving school. In one of the London prisons it was found that many of the boys received boys between the ages of 16 and 20 had hardly been to school at all and could neither read nor write. They generally explain their illiteracy by saying that they come from neighborhoods where attendance officers can be evaded or defied. These "juvenile-adults" as prisoners between 16 and 20 years of age are called in stature and weight, under the average of the rural laboring class, and even under that of the artisan population of the towns.

TAKING TUCKS IN THE STOMACH

Philadelphia Dispatch to New York Tribune.

Taking tucks in the stomach is an operation that has of late relieved a number of patients at the Gynecean hospital in this city, and it is admitted there that at least ten cases of distension of the stomach have been cured thereby. The operations were performed by Dr. Henry D. Beyea, chief surgeon at the hospital.

It is said that in a number of cases of supposed appendicitis the real ailment has been found to be that the stomach by overeating has been strained almost to the bursting point and has been somewhat displaced. This was cured by "tucking" the stomach and shortening the ligaments to which the organ is attached.

TIGERS CHARM WOMEN IN ZOO

From the New York Press.

"One of the most interesting things to me in connection with this job," said the veteran keeper of the Bronx Park zoo "is the peculiar fascination women have for certain animals and their utter lack of interest in others. Of course as a rule, men are more interested than women, generally speaking, in wild beasts. But the masculine interest lies in admiration of physical qualities or a curiosity to find out at close range how the creature lives. The woman's feeling on the other hand nine times out of ten, is one of rapt fascination, impossible to overcome when she is close to certain creatures of the woods.

"This emotion never manifests itself for the eaters of grass. For the elephant or deer the average woman feels no real interest whatever. It is toward the devourers of flesh, particularly the felines, that your wife or sister or cousin feels drawn in that inexplicable way. You must spend days in the lion house in order to appreciate fully the way in which women stand spellbound before those cages. ... is the fascination of the ... I have seen women become absolutely unconscious of the outer world in their contemplation of the motions ... A few days ago a woman stood for more than two hours before the big cobras. She looked like the ... of a workingman who made fair pay. I'll bet if you gave her a ... she wouldn't read a word of it."

Fancy broadcloths in one tone colorings and woven satin or cheviot ... are numerous.

Smallest People on Earth on Exhibition Here.

These little people are attracting a great deal of attention with their amusing exhibition in a store room at 17 Pikes Peak avenue. It is amusing to watch these tiny bits of humanity dance and go through their acrobatic stunts. The little man, Juan de la Cruz, is only 29 inches tall, and his sister Martina 27 inches tall, 26 years of age. The midgets were first brought to the United States under a contract with the war department and placed on exhibition in the Philippine reservation at the St. Louis World's fair. They were awarded medals of honor for their performances there.

The midgets' brother, an average sized Filipino, plays the music for the little people. Juan's wife, an average sized Filipino woman, is with him. Their baby girl, Marie, won the first prize, a large silver cup, at the greater New York baby show in 1905 for being the most beautiful international baby. Over 4000 babies were on exhibition.

The Remarkable Will Of A Doctor

One of the world's greatest physicians, upon his deathbed, called his children about him and said: "When I die I will leave the secret of life as I have discovered it in my practice."

When they read his will, it directed them to a safety vault which contained a large envelope marked thus: "The Secret of Life." Upon opening it, they read: "Don't abuse the stomach." This profound thinker, after a long life of medicine, knew the stomach to be the throne of man.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will help you make a stomach healthy.

If it is worn out and lacks the fluids of digestion, these tablets will take the place of such fluids.

If it is filled with poisonous juices, these tablets will neutralize and remove such poison.

If you cannot eat without agony, these tablets will show you how you can. If you will eat foolishly, or drink excessively, or if business demands abuse of stomach, these tablets after means will make such abuse light, for they take the hardship away from the stomach.

They are great digesters, filled with more powerful agents than the system can give. They go back into the blood after they have digested a meal, thereby increasing the ability of nature to take care of digestion without exhausting other organs.

Send us your name and address and we will send you a trial package by mail, free. Address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich.

ROYAL BIRD WILL BRING BIG PRICE

THANKSGIVING TURKEY WILL NOT BE CHEAP.

Quality Promises to Be Much Above Average, Owing to Favorable Fattening Weather.

When the housewife goes marketing for the Thanksgiving dinner she will find that her purchases, be she ever so economical, will require the greater part of a five-dollar bank note. While in many homes the holiday feast will cost many times this moderate outlay, the expense of the Thanksgiving dinner for families in moderate circumstances will average between three and five dollars, according to the statistics of dealers.

Turkey, the traditional concomitant of the Thanksgiving celebration, will be higher this year than last. While there are plenty of turkeys on the market, dealers explain that the high price of grain will advance the price of the fowl before Thanksgiving day. The best quality of turkey will sell at 25 cents a pound, with prospects of an advance if the demand becomes heavy.

Draw Supply From Kansas.

Ten thousand turkeys will be required to supply the Thanksgiving dinner of Colorado Springs, Colorado City and Manitou. The few poultry farms of Colorado are entirely inadequate to supply the demand in the state, and as a consequence the farms of Kansas and Nebraska are called upon to make up the deficiency.

Although the price may be slightly higher than last year, the purchaser has the consolation at least that if anything the quality is a great deal better. Fine weather has been conducive to raising fine fowl, reversing the conditions of last year, when cold, wet weather in October retarded the growth of young fowl.

Six weeks ago the local market was well supplied with turkey, selling at a lower price than at present. This, say the dealers, was due to the fact that raisers thought it better to sell the fowl at lower prices than to feed them until the holidays.

Chicken and duck will sell at from 18 to 20 cents, with no immediate prospect of an advance. Oysters are selling at 50 cents a quart. Celery and cranberries are of unusually fine quality this year. The market is filled with choice fruits and vegetables for the feast, and the prices are reasonable.

A Paying Investment.

Mr. John White, of 38 Highland Ave., Houlton, Maine, says: "Have been troubled with a cough every winter and spring. Last winter I tried many advertised remedies, but the cough continued until I bought a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery; before that was half gone, the cough was all gone. This winter the same happy result has followed; a few doses once more banished the annual cough. I am now convinced that Dr. King's New Discovery is the best of all cough and lung remedies." Sold under guarantee at all druggists. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

BURIAL SERVICE IMPRESSIVE

Descendant of Revolutionary Heroes Honored in Death by Officials of Colorado College.

The funeral of Mrs. Lucy E. Smith, who died October 28 at the home of her son-in-law, Guy H. Albright, 1220 North Cascade avenue, was held from the residence yesterday afternoon. The services were conducted by Dean D. P. Gregg, pastor of the First Congregational church, and prayer was offered by Dr. W. F. Slocum, president of Colorado College. The hymns "Lead Kindly Light" and "Nearer My God to Thee" were sung by Mrs. Thompson and Miss Rooke. The pallbearers were Dean E. S. Parsons, Professors Strieby, Ladd, Schneider, Smith and C. W. D. Parsons of Colorado College. The remains have been placed in a vault awaiting removal to Massachusetts.

Mrs. Smith is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Guy H. Albright of this city and a son, Bertram E. Smith of New York.

Mrs. Smith was a descendant of Lieutenant Samuel Smith of Hadley, Mass., a noted Indian fighter of the early colonial days. She counted among her ancestors William Westwood, Aaron Cook, Nathaniel Dickenson and Nathaniel Foote, who came to Boston with Governor Winthrop in 1630, and also the revolutionary soldiers, Moses Munson, John and Joel Foskett, William Jones and Elisha Paul and Rufus Smith.

ISHMAELS OF CEYLON.

From the Dundee Advertiser.

There is a curious tribe of people in Ceylon called the Rodiyas, who live the life of social Ishmaels, despised and [illegible] their fellows. Until quite recently they lived apart from all [illegible] other men, in holes and caves. In no case may they lie down to rest with other men; they may not enter a temple or a court of justice, and [illegible] occasions are compelled to "stand afar off." So low down in the scale of humanity are they placed that they may not even speak with strangers except through the intermediary of a man of the lowest caste above their own. Of late years their status has been improved, and they are less servile in consequence, but even now they fall on their knees with uplifted hands to address people of the lowest recognized caste, and upon the approach of a traveler they shout to warn him to stop until they can get out of the road and he can pass without risk of defilement from the proximity of their persons. GETTING EXPERIENCE.

From the Chicago News.

When I was young I had my fling
I sowed wild oats and little more,
An awful harvest did they bring
A fact it's useless to deplore,
Next time I'd know just what to do;
I'm sure that I'd have better sense,
It's not all loss; there's profit too,
I've gained so much experience.

I married rashly, for my wife
Is not what I supposed she'd be.
I've had a dickens of a life,
From care I never have been free
But still it's useless to repine,
Next time I'll know far better, hence
A certain consolation's mine,
I've gained so much experience

I had a little money once
It's partly lost and partly burned
But tho' I may have been a dunce,
Think of the lesson I have learned!
I've bought [illegible] highest rate
And yet [illegible] mourned
Unless indeed it is too late
I've gained so much experience

Turin Residence of the Duke of Abruzzi Will Miss Elkins Ever Live Here?

PARIS, Nov. 7—Miss Katherine Elkins and her lover, the Duke of Abruzzi have many obstacles in the way of their international marriage. The devoted and enthusiastic duke has stopped at nothing to pave the way for his marriage but has handled it all so diplomatically that he has overcome many of the barriers between him and his American bride. Just as everything was apparently smoothed over and the Italian court and King Victor Emmanuel had not only granted permission to the marriage but also agreed that Miss Elkins should be received as a royal princess, comes the report that King Edward of England has stepped in and opposed the match on the ground that Miss Elkins would become a sister-in-law of King Edward's niece, a relationship which does not appeal to the British monarch.

It seems that Queen Margherita was on her way to London to complete arrangements for the Turin-Connaught betrothal when the new outbreak [illegible] her journey in Paris. The English court does not care to [illegible] West Virginia relations in this round about way and it is believed in Paris that the Turin-Connaught match is definitely off since the Duke of Abruzzi is determined to take an American bride into the royal Italian family

The Duke of Abruzzi is expected to arrive in America to see Miss Elkins in the near future, but up to the present time he has not taken passage on any liner so far as known.

LONDON, Oct 7—The London Daily Mail's Rome correspondent telegraphs as follows

"The Duchess d'Aosta, stepmother of the Duke of Abruzzi, has officially informed the mayor of Aosta that the approaching marriage of the duke and Miss Elkins will occur very shortly. The duke leaves Italy for America in the middle of November and a squadron of three battleships will sail at the same time

No wedding arrangements have been made in Italy, as the marriage will occur in America. On her arrival in Italy the new princess will be officially presented at court and a great celebration will be held in her honor in Rome and Turin

"The report that Cardinal Gibbons is supervising Miss Elkins' conversion creates a pleasant impression in Italy where the feeling is most cordial to the duke and his bride. It is also reported that several members of the royal family have ordered wedding presents from a Turin jeweler

"According to the most reliable information the official announcement of the engagement will come out through a letter from King Victor Emmanuel to the premier, Signor Giolitti, shortly after the duke arrives in the United States which will be communicated to the public by an Italian news agency. The premier also will immediately inform the cabinet ministers, the presidents of the senate and the chamber of deputies and the high officials of state"

INDEPENDENCE IN POLITICS.

IT has been a long time since complete returns from a general election were so slow in reaching the public. Long before midnight last Tuesday everybody knew that Taft had been elected by a big majority, but it was several days before the results in many of the doubtful states were definitely known. Another peculiar fact is that several of the states which before the election were considered entirely safe for one candidate or the other turned out to be decidedly doubtful. For instance, nobody had regarded Missouri as even possibly Republican, but it has given its electoral vote to Taft and chosen a Republican ticket, while the Democrats have a majority in the next legislature of only four on joint ballot, which means that there is a faint possibility of a Republican Senator being chosen to succeed "Gumshoe Bill" Stone.

Everywhere the returns bring surprises. States which four years ago gave an unprecedented majority to Roosevelt are now for Taft by a comparatively small margin, while New York, which was expected to be close, or even Democratic, has given a bigger vote than it gave Roosevelt. For the first time since 1896 New York City has given a plurality—a little more than 15,000—to a Republican Presidential candidate, but at the same time [it went] more than four times as strong for the Democratic Gubernatorial nominee. In Maryland the outcome is so close that the electoral vote is split, Bryan getting six votes and Taft two. Four states, all normally Republican, have gone overwhelmingly for Taft and at the same time elected Democratic Governors.

What is the meaning of all this? Simply that the day of hide-bound partisanship has passed, and that of political independence is at hand. The man who scratches his ballot is the one responsible for these [conditions]. There is no doubt that on the whole [it] is beneficial for the people have chosen their officials more because of fitness than because of their membership in a certain party. The Minnesota election is a notable example of this. Governor Johnson is a Democrat and so prominent in his party that he was the only man seriously considered as a rival of Bryan for the Presidential nomination. He has served two terms as Governor of Minnesota and last Tuesday was elected to a third term. Each time he was elected by Republican votes, for Minnesota is a strong Republican state and no man could be elected to the Governorship with Democratic votes alone. His successive triumphs simply show that the people without regard to party recognize his superior fitness and wish to retain him in office and only an ardent partisan would deny that this is a much better way than it would be to turn him out and put a Republican in his place merely because Johnson is a Democrat.

The election of Herbert S. Hadley as Governor of Missouri is another evidence of the growth of the independent spirit. Hadley has succeeded admirably in his present office of Attorney General, to which he was elected in the Republican landslide four years ago. Under the old conditions in Missouri the fact that he was a Republican would have barred him permanently from the Governorship, for however much the people might have admired [him] his connection with the Republican party as a permanent disability. But last Tuesday he was elected Governor by a majority so large that it could not have been secured from Republican sources alone. Hadley owes his election to Democratic votes, just as Johnson owes his to Republican votes. In both cases the people put patriotism above partisanship.

REFORM IS HERE TO STAY. It is idle for party leaders to attempt to resist the advance of the independent spirit. It is here to stay. Everybody recognizes the necessity for organization in politics. There must be an organization in every political party and there must be a "machine," that is, a sort of executive board which by reason of its compactness and experience can carry on the work of organization and administration more effectively than is possible when such work is intrusted to a large number. Every citizen [illegible] in the future as he has in the past to be a member of a political party, but it is hardly likely that his allegiance will be as hide-bound. He will do more of his own thinking on political questions instead of leaving it to his party leaders. This point was well illustrated by George Ade in a recent contribution to The Saturday Evening Post, in which he said that twenty or thirty years ago every man was proud to say that he "belonged" to the Republican party or to the Democratic party, but now he does not put it that way. He is a member of the party; he does not "belong" to it.

The popular fear of injuring the party by adopting an independent stand is responsible for countless political and governmental evils. The thick-and-thin partisan will tell you that the only time to make war honorably on your own party is before the nominations are made. His gospel is to fight as hard as you please before the primaries and conventions, but after the nominations have been made you must "line up" for the ticket and do everything in your power to elect it, even though you may be convinced that it is unworthy of your support. It seems to us that this argument is decidedly flimsy. If you have good and sufficient reasons for believing before the convention that a certain candidate is unfit for public office, why are not those reasons equally valid after he has been nominated? If he wins the nomination in spite of his unfitness, why is he more worthy of support then than before? In short, in what way does his victory in the nominating convention operate to give him a clean bill of health? Yet, according to the doctrine which places partisanship above citizenship, it is the duty of every voter to help elect the unworthy candidate merely because he has secured a place on the party ticket!

WELFARE OF WHOLE PEOPLE. That doctrine has held good from the beginning of American politics down to the present time, but the people are beginning to realize that it is utterly wrong. They are beginning to appreciate that good citizenship imposes a different duty—the duty of carrying the fight from the nominating convention to the polls. Defeat the unworthy candidate in the nominating convention if you can, but if you fail in this, then defeat him at the polls, for if he is unworthy of your support in the first instance he is just as unworthy in the second.

The United States always has had, and probably always will have, a government by party, for it is ingrained in our political system and we could not eradicate it if we would. Its only defects are those arising from blind, unswerving partisanship, the failure of the voter to distinguish clearly between party welfare and public welfare. So long as he could be persuaded to vote a straight party ticket at all times, so long as he could be frightened into believing that independent voting was fraught with all sorts of dangers, the rule of the boss was secure.

But, the results of the election last Tuesday not only in this county and state, but throughout the nation, show that the bugaboo is no longer effective. The people are still members of political parties but they no longer "belong" to them. They will vote for the candidates named on their party ticket if those candidates are satisfactory to them; otherwise they will scratch the ticket in favor of somebody else. That is the lesson taught by the election last Tuesday, and if the party leaders have the good sense to profit by it they will save themselves much trouble in the future.

PRESS OPINIONS on Taft's Election

From the New York American (Dem.)

Mr. Taft on the heels of Mr. Roosevelt's 4th of March departure will take up the responsibilities of the White House. Everyone should give him his best word, his best help. The need of the hour is confidence—commercial confidence. The latter can only be arrived at by the whole people coming together as one and giving Mr. Taft their compact support. No one questions his honesty, his patriotism, his public well meaning. If he make mistakes, fall into error, it will be of the head. The Taft heart is all right. Until such mistake appear, such error occur, no one caring honestly for general good will criticise or interfere. There has been too much Democracy, too much Republicanism, in brief too much partisanship injected into government in the recent past, and thereby the popular welfare suffered and was not served. It will redound to common weal and induce that condition of commercial and political confidence so necessary to the general well doing if for a change, a healthful change, we set partisanship aside, supplanting it with broad patriotism. Mr. Taft was the candidate of a party. He will be the people's President, a truth we all should bear in honest mind. Let him not therefore be prejudged to his disfavor. Give him time to act and room to act. Be not eager to criticise, ready to find complaining fault. Banish distrust until Mr. Taft in what he does shall himself furnish the seed and the food of it.

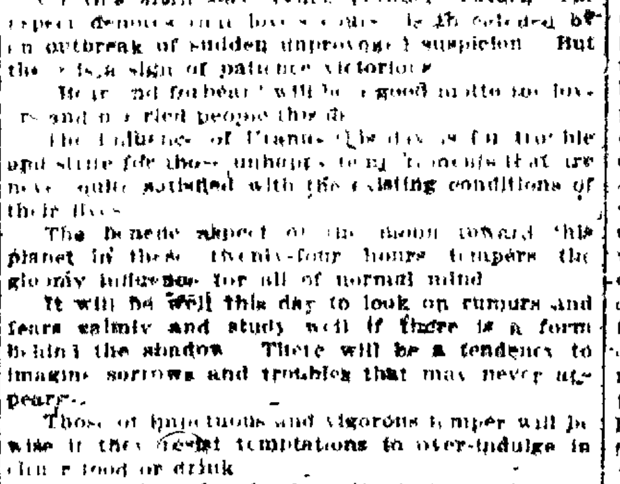

From the New York Tribune (Dem.)

The country has voted emphatically to continue the policies of the Roosevelt administration and to continue them under the leadership of the man whom it considers President Roosevelt's logical successor. The question of heirship has been definitely settled and Mr. Bryan's fantastic claim that he, not Mr. Taft, was the legitimate legatee, goes glimmering with those many other false alarms with which he has waked the echoes since he began his variegated career as an impressionist and opportunist politician. The decisive character of Mr. Taft's victory shows that the American public is not to be captured by specious pretenses and hollow promises and that it will not surrender the substance of orderly, progressive and responsible administration for the shadow of hasty, drastic and impracticable reforms. There can be no doubt, in view of the country's verdict, that a great majority of the voters thoroughly approve the policies which the Republican party has been putting into practice in the last four years and that they recognize in Mr. Taft an ideal instrument for the further development of those policies. In electing him President the nation indicates its purpose not to rest until the abuses which the Republican party attacked are rooted out of our political, commercial and industrial life, and undemocratic inequality and favoritism have permanently given place to the 'square deal.'

From the Chicago Record-Herald (Ind.)

There are few men who could have borne up under the heavy burdens that Judge Taft has carried, but while he has taken his responsibilities seriously enough, his strength has sufficed for all the demands upon him and he has captivated all who have come in contact with him by his frankness, his kindliness and his good humor. Men have not played the sycophant to him in public and then said in private that he was not equal to his capabilities. The most critical observers of events at Washington have shown that the admiration so often expressed for him grew with a more intimate knowledge of his character.

He has been true to the promise of his youth, has justified great expectations and will receive heartfelt congratulations from every part of the country. When we laud him as a statesman we derive additional satisfaction from the thought that he is the very best type of the American citizen, that he has succeeded splendidly without resorting to any of the tricks, artifices and expedients that are so often associated with the conception of the politician. By all the signs we know that he must make a great and good President.

CORRUPTION BY CORPORATIONS MUST STOP.

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Previously sensible people, in the absence of exact information to the contrary, generally believed that much of the talk of corruption was exaggerated. They now know that corruption is an acute danger. The revelations have caused a complete change in the attitude of the average man of sound patriotism toward the use of money in elections and the influence of corporations and trusts in political life. It is no longer an excuse or palliation to say that all parties and politicians use corrupt methods. The time has come when the check must be applied. The subject is not debatable. The task is to eradicate the evil and to drive from public life the men who practice or give [illegible] it.

THE STANDARD OIL LETTERS.

From the Portland (Me.) Press.

Hearst is speaking in California and still drawing forth from an apparently inexhaustible portfolio Archbold letters to this man and that. The thief who stole the letters made a rich haul. Evidently the Standard Oil had some precious traitors in its employ, but it is political death to the men involved.

COLONEL STEWART'S HEART.

From the Charleston News and Courier.

The finding of the retiring board is negatively reassuring. Inferentially it is that nothing is out of gear in Colonel Stewart's anatomy except the valves of his heart, and that amounts to a certificate of soundness as to his legs, arms, kidneys, liver, lungs and teeth. One cannot but cherish the hope that within another 21 years he may live down the heart affection and be restored to the active roll, where he has proved a palpitating center of interest.

STEFFENS' PERIL.

From the Springfield Republican.

After a protracted study of the municipal ills of San Francisco, Lincoln Steffens has moved across the continent and will endeavor to discover what is the matter with Boston for the enlightenment of an army of anxious magazine readers. If Mr. Steffens does not watch out some city in which he makes his residence will yet elect him to some responsible office and make him demonstrate how much he really knows about the ways and means of reforming municipal government.

BRING CUBA IN!

From the Washington Post.

It is the opinion of the Post that before the school boy of 1908 is a voter the American flag will go up in Cuba "to stay put," and the trade between Havana and Baltimore will be as free as that between Cincinnati and New Orleans. We do not believe that condition will work disadvantageously to the cane planter of the south or the beet grower of the west. Neither will the tobacco grower of Connecticut or Pennsylvania or Florida or Wisconsin suffer.

As for the tobacco planters of Kentucky, Virginia, Ohio and North Carolina, Cuban tobacco does not compete with their product, and the tariff tax on it is a burden upon rather than a protection to them.

By all means bring the Gem of the Antilles in out of the red fire of misrule.

GIFFORD PINCHOT'S FUTURE

From the Providence Journal.

It may or it may not be true that "if Mr. Roosevelt asks any favor of the Taft administration (prospective) it will be that his friend Gifford Pinchot be appointed to succeed the venerable James Wilson as secretary of agriculture," but there is no doubt that Mr. Pinchot would make an excellent secretary either of that department or of the department of the interior. He is a keen student of the great problems of our national resources and their conservation and has done more, probably, than any other one man to arouse the public to the need of saving the forests of the country. Mr. Pinchot is comparatively a young man, of [illegible] what [illegible] and Mr. Taft, who knows him as well as Mr. Roosevelt does, is likely, if he is elected, to invite him into his intimate [illegible] if the present executive does not request.

UNCLE SAM'S WEATHER WORK.

From the St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Uncle Sam is right in spending a good deal of money on weather. He watches it everywhere in his broad domain with very keen and delicate instruments and wisely dismissing [illegible] forecasts tries to get closer to the business of tomorrow. Europe, for all its excellence, has done no better, if as well. Observations far back there 200 years and two of the long-range philosophers agree. They have tabulated the level of lakes, the movement of glaciers, the freezing and liberation of rivers, the seasonal states of vegetation, and the periodicity of sunspots. It is no particular purpose as yet in establishing weather rotation. On the rocks is scratched the testimony of great icecaps that advanced and retreated, but man is not particularly interested in a range as long as that. He would like to be able to see two days ahead and trust that in indulging the hope he is not chasing a rainbow.

ZEPPELIN AFLOAT AGAIN

From the Washington Star.

It is reported that enthusiasm was somewhat [illegible] today by the triumph [illegible] able performance of Count Zeppelin's dirigible airship, the successor of the [illegible] destroyed machine that was wrecked in August in the course of a prolonged trip. It may not be questioned that this enormous gas bag with its high-power motors is capable of executing some remarkable maneuvers in the air and carrying a large company of passengers. But it is also plain that it must have good weather for its voyage. Not until the Zeppelin airship or another of the same type has made its way to a fixed destination through high wind will it become acceptable as contributing to the solution of the problem of human flight. Indeed, not one of the devices [illegible] whether gas bag or aeroplane has proved itself a practicable machine in all stages of the weather. Even the Wright brothers who have perhaps most closely approached the goal have acquired comparative calm for their experiments and demonstrations. There remains Mr. Herring, whose machine is to be tested at Fort Meyer within a few days. It may be that he has found a means of [illegible] meeting the requirements in this respect. His claim is that his device is self-adjustable to all conditions of the air. If this is true he has indeed solved the problem and there is a greater future for his apparatus than for even the giant dirigible of Zeppelin.

TODAY'S HOROSCOPE

Sunday, November 8, 1908.

Look now with calm and judging eye
On shadows that would terrify.

Mars enters the sign of Virgo and the full moon enters the constellation and sign of Taurus. On this 313th day Venus parallels Saturn. The aspect denotes [illegible] colored by an outbreak of sudden unprovoked suspicion. But this is a sign of patience victorious.

Bear and forbear will be a good motto for lovers and married people this day.

The influence of Uranus this day is for trouble and strife for those unhappy [illegible] that are never quite satisfied with the existing conditions of their lives.

The benefic aspect of the moon toward this planet in these twenty-four hours tempers the gloomy influence for all of normal mind.

It will be well this day to look on rumors and fears calmly and study well if there is a form behind the shadow. There will be a tendency to imagine sorrows and troubles that may never appear.

Those of bumptious and vigorous temper will be wise if they resist temptations to over-indulge in their food or drink.

An excellent day for household affairs [illegible] if connected with feathered creatures.

Women with today for birthdate should begin at once to control their minds and hearts for ideal service. An opportunity is indicated for them during the twelvemonth. The young will be courted.

Men with this birthdate will profit by making determination and grit their watchwords. It will lead them far.

The sign over children born today is for powerful tendencies that will spell great success if led aright. Girls should be taught to enjoy the higher literature. Boys may show a tendency toward procrastination.

I TOLD YOU SO.

Well, Bill has been elected,
As I said right along,
I never once suspected
That I could figure wrong.
Bill couldn't lose—I knew it,
He had things all his way.
It makes me glad to giggle
"I told you so" today.

Why, from the first I reckoned
That Bill was going to win.
I told my friends to watch him,
I knew he would get in.
He set a pace and kept it
Each day right on the go.
That's why today I'm saying
These words, "I told you so."

Whenever I met with doubters
I told them, "But on Bill
You see his fight was managed
With quite a bit of skill!
His speeches too were weighty—
Why, he had every show,
And now I'm glad I'm able To say "I told you so."

—Charles R. Barnes in the New York World.

VALE, BRYAN.

Farewell,
A long farewell,
A permanent and sure farewell
To all thy frequency.
[illegible] burns thy candle out,
Here from its sputter gleams
The flicker of the tallow dip
Which lighted all thy dreams
Of campaign conquest and the Pie
Which for so long has stood
Upon the counter waiting for Somebody to make good.
The matchless leadership is matched
As usual, but now
And make your farewell bow.
Farewell, farewell
To all your hopes.
You're knocked clean outside
Out of the ropes.
Sixteen to one are odds too great
For even such as thou
And you must swap your cross of gold
For [illegible] and furbished plow.
Back to the fields
Where the pumpkins nod
A fair good morning
To thee, friends of the sod.
No longer can you claim the sage
With your magnetic spells.
And likewise of farewells.
Your query "Shall the People rule?"
Is rather up to you
Since Tuesday, when the ballot box
Replied "They shall and do."
The whole of [illegible] were heard
The ballots as they fell,
Most of them cheerful, some in tears
And all of them farewell.
Farewell to all thy greatness, Bill
Three times and out is yours.
It is not he who fills the air
That figures in the scores.
Farewell, a lingering, last farewell
Whatever others do,
There's none can ever take your place—
We got so used to you.
And yet farewell
Then good-bye,
So long, adieu,
And as we sigh
There cometh an end to his last campaign
And Bill is never the same again.

THE SAVING SENSE

From the Philadelphia Public Ledger.

The sense of humor is differentiated from all other senses of every kind by being known as the saving sense. For the sense of humor comes to the rescue in a crisis almost sooner than the sight or hearing, and while the eyes and ears give warning to the physical apprehensions of the body, the sense of humor relieves the apprehension of the mind by restoring the perspective and the true proportions of things in the mind's eye. This life of ours is a serious business always—"full o' fechtin'," as the Scotch shepherd dog in his continuous round of quarrel found it, and no man or woman who helps or is helped, robs or is robbed, passes or is passed by, on the journey through this world can fail to find that "life is real, life is earnest." But the tragedy of life is no more real than the comedy. The joy of living and of those who live has just as much right upon God's footstool as the discipline of sorrow. Are we not told that God Himself shall wipe away all tears? If all the world's a stage, L'Allegro in the sock of Comedy may justly dispute the center of it with Il Penseroso and the tragic buskin. The laughter of the sunlight brings the harvest to fruition hand in hand with the tears of the falling rain. Virgil, that great humorist, found tears in everything; but he and Homer before him found even on high Olympus inextinguishable laughter shaking the skies. In the divinely ordered plan, from the beginning, there was room for joy as well as sorrow, smiles as well as tears, the sheer "irreflective, unrestrained delight" in living along with the consciousness of the cypress and the yew that line life's thoroughfare.

The world has always been grateful to its makers of clean mirth. Not only the jester with his cap and bells—not merely the top-liner of vaudeville foolery—not simply the wholesale purveyor to the gaiety of nations whose works pile high the bookstalls and swell the circulation of magazines. The professional fun-maker has his place and wins his due meed of gratitude. But all around us people that we know—big and little—old and young—are the sunshine of the houses that they live in. Children are the chief humorists. The things they think and say and do are funnier than the wit retailed to us over the footlights. They are unstudied, spontaneous authors and actors demanding no pay from the family circle. "As if his whole vocation were endless imitation," the child's quick sense of the ridiculous reduces all life to the terms of exquisite burlesque, delicious pantomime. If only the grown-ups might assume the fern-seed cap of the fairy tale, that conferred invisibility, and be present unseen in the nursery to see and hear how children play when nobody is looking, they would spend their lives between the doll house and the rocking horse, asprawl upon the carpet. The man who has no heart, no time to think of a child at play—the man who would walk across a boy's game of marbles instead of around it—is "fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils." He must—he has been told and he should believe it—become a child again if he would enter the kingdom of heaven.

A person has not learned properly to laugh who cannot sometimes laugh at his own self. The sense of humor is the saving sense most of all in that it saves us from ourselves. A vile sin is conceit and a laugh destroys it. There are deplorable customs and practices that withstand the assault of every weapon but the barbed lance of ridicule and a well-directed shaft of raillery will often find a vulnerable point in the armor of self complacency and touch to the quick the self-satisfied sinner. But as there never was a good joke yet that told a lie, or befouled a sanctity or besmirched a spotless reputation, so a joke that wounds the sensitiveness or delicacy of one who does not deserve to suffer is the worst of all bad jokes. Nothing is so easy as the cheap and senseless humor that profanes a shrine and desecrates the holy of holies of the imagination. The Yahoos, its practitioners, have naught in common with the humorists. The humorist [illegible] their mud bricks as building material for his House of Mirth—neither will he take their garbage and convert it into fuel for potboilers. The humor that deserves and will attain the longest life is void of offense against the established canons of decency. The humor of "Alice in Wonderland," the fun of the "Just-So Stories," is perennial, and the world will take delight in them when the humoristic muck-rakers and what they scribbled in the mud are indignantly forgotten.

TAFT'S ELECTION A TONIC

Business Already Shows Improvement, Hughes Declares.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 7.—In the flaring light of torches, borne by members of the Young Men's Republican club of this city, who marched to the executive mansion tonight to serenade him, Governor Hughes delivered a brief address in which he declared that the election of William H. Taft to the presidency is a tonic to the country and that already his utterances since election have strengthened the public confidence and give stimulus to honest enterprise.

CURED RHEUMATISM

Nearly everybody is susceptible to a twinge of rheumatism, sciatica, toothache, headache or neuralgia, and it's never safe to be without a good remedy for an emergency of this kind.

No matter what kind of pain you have the beneficial effect of Sloan's Liniment is immediate. You lay it on lightly—no rubbing whatever and a pleasant warmth is felt at once. The Liniment penetrates right to the bone and quickly stops the pain.

Mr. Chas. J. Budlong of Anthony, R. I., Box 125, writes: "For many years I was a great sufferer from rheumatism. My hips would swell to enormous proportions and my knee joints would pain me in the most excruciating, awful manner imaginable. I used often to have to fall from the bed into a chair and thence to the floor, when I wanted to get from my bed. I used only some six or eight bottles of your celebrated Liniment and was cured. I cheerfully recommend its use to all rheumatic sufferers. Refer to me if you so desire. All letters answered."

A PRINCE.

Sam Dutton of the Albany hotel, Denver, was christened "Prince of the Italian Gardens" at the opening of that portion of his house a few nights ago. It don't matter so much about the Italian garden part of the affair, but the title of "prince" fits Mr. Dutton to a nicety. He was generally recognized as one long before the title was formally conferred.—Omaha Daily Reporter.

OBITUARY.

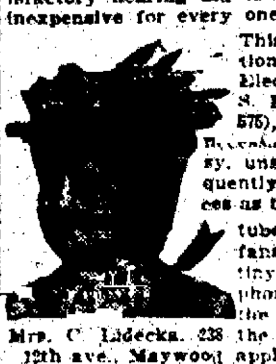

The late Mrs. Henry W. Hallett, who departed this life in this city on October 21, was born in Springfield, Mass., in the year 1840 on August 31 of that year. About 28 years ago she removed to Colorado Springs with her husband and family, and for the past 14 years resided at her home in Ivywild. Her many rare and sterling qualities endeared her to a wide circle of friends, who unite with her son, Mr. C. J. Hallett, and two daughters, Mrs. Jay More and Mrs. H. D. Do You Hear Well?

The Stolz Electrophone A New, Electrical, Scientific and Practical Invention for those who are Deaf or Partially Deaf—MAY NOW BE TESTED IN YOUR OWN HOME.

Deaf or partially deaf people may now make a month's trial of the Stolz Electrophone at home. This personal practical test serves to prove that the device satisfies, with ease, every requirement of a perfect hearing device. Write for particulars at once, before the offer is withdrawn, for by this personal test plan the final selection of the one completely satisfactory hearing aid is made easy and inexpensive for every one.

This new invention, the Stolz Electrophone (U. S. Patent No. 763,575), renders unnecessary such clumsy, unsightly and frequently harmful devices as trumpets, horns, tubes, ear drums, fans, etc. It is a tiny electric telephone that fits on the ear and which, the instant it is applied, magnifies the sound waves in such manner as to cause an astonishing increase in the clearness of all sounds. It overcomes the buzzing and roaring ear noises and, also, so constantly and electrically exercises the vital parts of the ear that, usually, the natural unaided hearing itself is gradually restored.

What Three Business Men Say.

The Electrophone is very satisfactory. Being small in size and great in hearing qualities makes it preferable to any I have tried and, I believe, I have tried all of them. M. W. HOYT,
Wholesale Grocer.
Michigan Ave. and River St., Chicago.

I got so deaf I could not hear with my speaking tube and was advised to try the Electrophone. After fifteen years of deafness, discomfort and worry, I now hear perfectly at church and at concerts.
W. R. UTLEY, Sales Mgr.,
S. A. Maxwell & Co., Chicago.

I have now used your Electrophone over a year, and know that it is a first class, scientific hearing device. Without it people have to shout directly in my ear to make me hear. With it, I can hear distinctly when spoken to in an ordinary tone. Best of all, it has stopped my head noises, which were a terrible aggravation. LEWIS W. MAY, Cashier, 100 Washington St., Chicago.

Write to, or call (call if you can) at our Chicago offices for particulars of our personal test offer and list of other prominent endorsers who will answer inquiries. Physicians cordially invited to investigate aurists' opinions.

S. J. KEMP KILLED IN MIDLAND SHOPS

WORKMAN CRUSHED BENEATH HEAVY CAR.

Several Others Barely Escape With Their Lives Unfortunate Man Well Known Here.

Crushed and mangled beyond recognition, Samuel J. Kemp, a car repairer in the Colorado Midland shops, met a horrible death about 1:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when the car under which he was working was dislodged from its supports and fell, grinding his head under the metal side braces.

Several men were working under an express car from which the trucks had been removed at one end, leaving that end supported by jackscrews. On the same siding was a dining car which had been left braked and braced, but which got loose in some unknown way and rolled down the inclined track, hitting the express car and knocking the supports from under it. As the dining car struck the car under which the men were working, all of them flung themselves from under the heavy coach except Kemp, who was further under the car than the rest. He was caught and crushed under the mass of wood and iron.

The body was removed to Boyle's undertaking establishment. In a few minutes all signs of the accident had been removed, the car was raised upon the supports and the survivors of the accident continued their work.

The dead man was 35 years of age and was well known in this region. He is survived by a widow and an 8-year-old daughter, who live at Eighth and Jefferson streets, Colorado City.

BIG OPERATIONS ARE PLANNED

Memphis and Idaho Springs Company Has Ample Finances to Prosecute Heavy Work.

IDAHO SPRINGS, Colo. Nov. 7.—The Memphis and Idaho Springs Mining company will immediately resume operations on its Seaton hill properties. The company has been reorganized and financed for the accomplishment of very thorough exploitation and development. The principal work will be done in the Newhouse tunnel, where drifts will be driven both east and west from the tunnel. The shaft, however, will be equipped with heavier machinery, and the ore bodies heretofore opened will be mined and production maintained from these reserves during the progress of the deeper development. Messrs. Woodruff and Malone of Denver will be local representatives of the company.

IN DEFENSE OF THE KISS.

From the Louisville Courier Journal

Science presumes too far when it thinks it may stop a kiss by threatening the performers with a tuberculosis germ. The germ is somewhat a despot, but he and his physicians can no more accomplish the downfall and extinction of the kiss than a woman with a broom can sweep the clouds out of the heavens.

If there is anything—seeing that it cannot be abolished—that should be glorified, idealized, and exalted, it is the kiss. Do otherwise and you rob literature of some of its greatest beauty, history of its finest romance; you simply take the bloom right out of everything that has been worth while. Make the kiss merely a disease-breeder, and think to what depths sinks the tale of Leander, who swam the Hellespont to kiss the fair Hero. And Romeo and Juliet, Paolo and Francesca, Ulysses and Calypso, Dante and Beatrice, Aucassin and Nicollette, and all the other kissers who ever kissed, become but gross traffickers in germs.

If the kiss is unromantic, what is there in life that is romantic? For the sake of the sentiment of the thing, which is but an offshoot of love, which is the greatest thing in the world, the tuberculosis experts should take down their signs and recall their warnings.

Soft, clinging, lustrous satins are great favorites of the hour. Undoubtedly it is to be a satin season.

BY THE AUTHOR OF

How to Tell the Birds From the Flowers

The Bee. The Beet. The Beetle.

Good Mr. Darwin once contended
That Beetles were from Becs descended;
And as my pictures show, I think,
The Beet must be the missing-link.
The Sugar-Beet and Honey-Bee
Supply the Beetle's pedigree:
The family is now complete,—
The Bee, the Beetle and the Beet.

The Bunny. The Tummy.

The superficial naturalists have often been misled,
By failing to dis-crim-inate between the tail and head:
It really is unfortunate such carelessness prevails,

WHEN CANNON ADAPTED.

From Success Magazine

While campaigning in his home State Speaker Cannon was once inveigled into visiting the public schools of a town where he was billed to speak. In one of the lower grades an ambitious teacher called upon a youthful Demosthenes to entertain the distinguished visitor with an exhibition of amateur oratory. The selection attempted was Byron's "Battle of Waterloo," and just as the boy reached the end of the first paragraph, Speaker Cannon gave vent to a violent sneeze.

"But, hush! hark!" declaimed the youngster—"a deep sound strikes like a rising knell! Did ye hear it?"

The visitor smiled, and a moment later the second sneeze—which the Speaker was vainly trying to hold back—came with increased violence.

"But, hark," (bawled the boy)—"that sound breaks in once more."

And nearer, clearer, deadlier than before!

Arm! arm! it is the cannon's opening roar!"

This was too much, and the laugh that broke from the party swelled to a roar when Uncle Joe" chuckled: "Put up your weapons, children. I won't shoot any more."

America's Most Remarkable Woman

Mrs. "Jack" Gardner of Boston to Whom Uncle Sam Has Been Paying Attention—He Wants Her Money—Mrs. Jack Has Lately Been Put Into a Book—How She has Tamed Lions and Helped Struggling Musicians—She Abhors the Newspapers but Collects Clippings on all Sorts of Subjects.

BOSTON, Oct. 31—Somebody in Boston is always putting somebody else into a book. When Hawthorne wrote "Blithedale Romance" everybody recognized that, though he was not a realist in the modern sense of the word, he had definite persons in mind—members of the queer little colony of socialists who made Brook Farm famous in the annals of American literary history. The genial "Autocrat" delighted in little personal touches. When William Dean Howells was still a Bostonian he wrote a series of novels in which there was no doubt as to local color. Only a short time ago "The Opal," by an anonymous author, astonished society in the Hub and the metropolis by a recital of episodes known actually to have taken place.

And now Mrs. John L. Gardner, "Mrs. Jack" as she is more usually called, the wealthy Boston art collector whose name has rightly or wrongly become associated with deeds extraordinary, fantastic and unexpected, has been featured, though in a minor role, in a literary production. Mrs. H. A. Mitchell Keays, a western writer, author of "The Road to Damascus," "He That Eateth Bread With Me" and other works, who has been living in the precincts of Harvard university for some time past, in her latest novel "I and My True Love," includes among her characters "Mrs. Planter" of Moodway Court. The personality has immediately been recognized as drawn from Mrs. Gardner of Fenway Court, just as people are already speculating as to what governor of Massachusetts was really meant in the characterization of the dashing bachelor, "Eben Gregory," and whether the actress "Edith Borrington" may or may not be regarded as identical with Miss Ethel Barrymore, and whether "Illel Sargent," the playwright, has any actual prototype.

The tone of all events of social life in Boston, including its dominance by one lady, is aptly suggested when Christina says fractiously, "I'm sure it doesn't matter how late we are at that old musicale."

"It will annoy Mrs. Planter dreadfully," protested Mrs. Warder. "Going to Moodway Court to a function is always the like of going to church at Saint Peter's and being waited for at the door of the pope."

And later, when Christina urges upon the governor of the state that he should marry Mrs. Planter, she receives the reply:

"She's ten years older than I am—more."

"There'll be ten years less of her, then," remarked Christina consolingly. "And then think," she looked profound, "we'll have that place, and all her heaps and heaps of money, and pictures, and statues, and——"

Just such wonderment why some notable has not succeeded in marrying the most famous widow in North America, is so characteristic of social speculation in the New England capital.

For no American woman, it is safe to say, has been more in the public eye than "Mrs. Jack"; none is quite so well known throughout the length and breadth of the land, although it is often surprising to find how few people have a definite knowledge of her personality and accomplishments. Thus four men not long ago, each from a different city, meeting at a hotel, were asked what they knew of Mrs. John L. Gardner of Boston. They asked, nearly in chorus: "What's that? Mrs. Jack?" On being told that that lady was meant, the man from New York replied:

"Why, she's the lion tamer, isn't she?"

The Philadelphian said: "Oh, she's the woman with that big Venetian palace."

The man from Pittsburg remembered that Mrs. Gardner had bought a Japanese kimono over his wife's head at an auction sale, and the citizen of Chicago recalled that she was a woman who had a fine feeling for music and a liberal purse opened frequently to the needs of impecunious performers.

Each had remembered a single fact or incident about a personality that has impressed itself upon the public as few women have been able. Since Isabella Stuart, of a fine New York family, was married to one of the wealthiest and most aristocratic of Bostonians, she has consistently lived up to a reputation for doing remarkable things. The Gothamite's recollection of her lion taming was due to the circumstance of her borrowing a good sized cub—she never actually owned it as some newspapers stated—which had been on exhibition in an animal show. It is a fact that for some days the animal was installed in the Gardner mansion where he ran things, including the servants, pretty much as he pleased, and, according to rumor, ran some of them so far that they never returned to the mansion. The creature was merely an exuberant little romper, like any other kitten, but servants and neighbors failed to appreciate the fun. When, however, the newspapers discovered what Mrs. Gardner was doing, the incidents of her playful gamboling with its youthful majesty naturally made good copy.

Apart from such occasional feats as lion taming, Mrs. Gardner has been distinguished for many years for her patronage of struggling musicians, painters and sculptors. She was largely responsible, it is understood, for the social prominence of Timothee Adamowski, for many years one of the chief performers of the Boston Symphony orchestra and now one of the most celebrated private teachers in America, and of George Proctor, the pianist. To Glosue Zingali, a needy Italian sculptor of the north end, she once found a man capable of doing better than ordinary commercial work and made it possible for him to get his start in life. Once at a south end theater she noticed a musician cheaply attired and evidently poorly paid, whose performance was such that he seemed capable of higher things. On inquiry she discovered that this man had written music, but that he had no money to pay for printing it or setting it up. Through her help he became a successful teacher and recipient of royalties on many successful compositions.

A number famous Italian gardens at Jamaica Hill, a suburb of Boston, Mrs. Gardner has frequently had on her payroll a number of educated young men. Persons have sometimes wondered why so many were needed to prune the hedges and cut the grass. Those who have known the circumstances, however, have understood that they were employed rather to assist them than to help Mrs. Gardner. At times as many as 50 Harvard students and candidates for musical careers have thus been at work around the estate. Laboring outdoors, amidst attractive surroundings, these student proteges have found reasonably remunerative, dignified and interesting work for which they have to thank the ever helpful "Mrs. Jack."

Mrs. Gardner's troubles and tribulations with Uncle Sam's treasurer have grown out of her unselfish anxiety to promote American art. Recognizing that a first essential to our having competent painting and sculpture in this country is to make available to the whole public examples of the greatest art of the ages, attractively set forth, she built some years ago, in what was then a bleak and barren district on the outskirts of Boston, her famous Italian palace. This is legally denominated the "Isabella Stuart Gardner, Museum in the Fenway, Limited." It is more generally known, as the paraphrase in Mrs. Keays' book indicates, by the name Fenway Court. In this structure, plain but picturesque in outward appearance, are the treasures gathered during a lifetime of discriminating collecting. The perfect adaptation of all the pictures and sculptures and other objects of art to their surroundings make the palace quite different from the ordinary museum. The compartments are given such names as the Titian room, the Veronese room, the Dutch room, the Chinese room, and so on, each on account of the general character of its contents. Among the treasures are world-famous works such as the Chigi Madonna, which disappeared from Italy and a few years ago turned up in the Fenway collection; a bronze bust by Benvenuto Cellini, of which Michael Angelo once wrote in a personal letter: "I have for years known you for one of the ablest jewelers in the world and I now find that you have equal abilities as a sculptor." Titian's great masterpiece, "The Rape of Europa," painted for Philip II of Spain as part of the dower of his daughter, who was to have been married to Charles I of England; a little Pieta by Raphael, which was once in the possession of Queen Christina of Sweden; Botticelli's "Death of Lucretia," from Lord Ashburnham's collection, and many others.

The expectation was that, as Fenway Court is open to the public at stated intervals, and is thus virtually one of the art museums of the country, works of art could be imported without payment of the duties which are assessed upon wealthy private collectors. In this way, Mrs. Gardner's comparatively limited funds—for she is not enormously rich as fortunes are now measured—would go much further, to the permanent advantage of all classes of Americans. But the courts ruled otherwise, and the owner of the Palace in the Fenway in 1903 paid the government somewhat over $200,000 in contested duties on importations. She might then have decided to close her palace to the public altogether, but, despite Uncle Sam's attitude, she has continued to open it on certain days, the proceeds from the admission fees going to some of the charities in which she is interested. A recent case in which a friend of Mrs. Gardner's, in Chicago imported treasures destined for Fenway Court on a basis alleged to be one of undervaluation, is generally familiar.

Mrs. Gardner is generally supposed to be hostile to the newspapers. She prefers, it is said, to read Walter Pater or Epictetus in books printed on hand-made paper and bound by Cobden-Sanderson. It has been reported, however, and not denied, that she has maintained a private press clipping bureau, the entire time of one man being devoted to reading newspapers for articles which mention her or which in any way are connected with the subjects in which she is interested.

Whatever her attitude toward the papers, she cannot be induced to give out interviews. One of the few occasions in which she talked for publication was when two young newspaper men attended a public opening at Fenway Court. They realized that there was no use in trying to induce "Mrs. Jack" to answer questions. Accordingly, as a ruse, both stood in front of one of her treasures and started a dispute as to its authorship. Louder and louder grew their tones as they argued pro and con. Presently Mrs. Gardner, who was quietly passing through the room, overheard, and, interrupting the young men whom she did not suspect of being reporters, explained that both were wrong. She then proceeded to give them detailed information not only about the work in question, but about many other features of her collection—all of which information appeared in the form of interviews in the morning papers.

Considering the prominence Mrs. Gardner has enjoyed not only in Boston, but throughout the United States it is rather remarkable that she has not figured in contemporary fiction more extensively than has been the case. Even in Mrs. Keays' book she is simply introduced as a minor character, the main action hinging upon the relations of a daughter to her mother, who was divorced from her father, and who offered to take back the child any time her services were really needed.

[illegible] THE TANNERS.

From Life.

Science makes possible new forms of [illegible]ness. Why should a man, simply because he has a telephone, be taken advantage of by the other man on the outside, who wants to sell him something, or bore him, or importune him in some other way? And a way important only to himself.

The man who has a telephone is, in a large sense, at the mercy of the outside world. As it may be of the utmost importance, he must always answer the call. If he tries to [illegible] System whereby the name and business of the person who calls him up must first be made known, then he is bound to offend some one and acquire the disagreeable reputation of a certain superiority and loftiness of which he is by no means guilty. He is in a sense defenseless, and all this, of course, is duly taken into consideration by the bad-mannered person who calls him up, who, if his victim were talking with some one else in the room, would scarcely have the effrontery to walk up and break into the conversation, or who wouldn't force him into a private office, but who makes no bones of gleefully sitting in a neighboring booth and compelling the unfortunate man to listen to him.

Thus the telephone has brought into existence a new nuisance. Something ought to be done about neutralizing his pernicious activity.

Chrysanthemum Queen Flower in Society

In order to insure insertion, all contributions intended for the society or woman's club department of the Sunday Gazette, must reach the editor, Mrs Ella Celeste Adams, 26 Cheyenne avenue, telephone Main 822, or The Gazette office, telephone Main 215, not later than noon of the preceding Friday.

THE stately chrysanthemum is more than ever the queen flower in society circles. This autumn it bids fair to outstrip all past records, for at the national flower show held last week in Chicago an enterprising exhibitor was there with a superb great white chrysanthemum which is christened "Taft"—permission having been obtained for the use of his name from the President-elect. With the prestige of such a famous name the future of the flower as the prime favorite of the season is assured.

Since the strenuous days of the presidential campaign are over, a revival of society interests may confidently be expected, and as the season advances there will be far more formal and elaborate modes of entertaining than has been the case lately. The return of several families to their homes in this city for the enjoyment of Colorado's matchless winter climate foreshadows a round of social gaiety for the large number who have abundant means and leisure.

Will Wed in January.

A fashionable event in Colorado Springs society will be the marriage of Miss Kathleen Lawrence, daughter of Mrs. Harriet Lawrence, of Ivywild, to Mr. Charles W. Davis of Cleveland, O., which is set for early in the new year. For some time Mr. Davis has been accustomed to spend his winters in this city and both the bride-elect and groom-elect are favorites in the exclusive circles of Colorado Springs. Mr. Davis made a flying trip to the city recently, leaving for Cleveland last Saturday.

Mrs. Arthur to Entertain.

Mrs. Chester Alan Arthur, who has recently returned to her home in Colorado Springs, after several months spent abroad and in the east, has issued invitations for a tea to be given tomorrow afternoon at her residence, 1106 North Nevada avenue, after 4 o'clock.

Mrs. Tutt's Tea.

One of the most largely attended functions in the social world the past week was given Tuesday by Mrs. Charles L. Tutt at her spacious residence on North Cascade avenue. The tea, while quite informal, was characterized by the lavish hospitality always found in the Tutt home, and the numerous guests greatly enjoyed meeting Mrs. Tutt's sister and niece, Mrs. Jesse Williamson and Miss Mary Williamson of Philadelphia, Pa., in whose honor the tea was given.

In Honor of Mrs. Williamson.

Mrs. Jesse Williamson of Philadelphia was the guest of honor at a beautiful yellow and white luncheon given Thursday by Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett. Splendid yellow chrysanthemums were selected as the table decorations and throughout the house there were potted chrysanthemums in profusion.

Hallowe'en Dinner at Acacia.

The Dutch room at the Acacia presented an unique and festive appearance Saturday evening when in readiness for an elaborate Hallowe'en dinner party given by Mrs. Arthur Gay Brigham. There were a number of jack-o-lanterns effectively hung about the room, and tiny ones at each cover, which furnished the only light as the guests were ushered in.

The centerpiece on the artistically arranged table was a large pumpkin forming the receptacle for a variety of the autumnal fruits. The place cards were crescent shaped and decorated with witches on broomsticks.

Mrs. Brigham's guests were Mr. and Mrs. William O'Brien, Mr. and Mrs. J. Dawson Hawkins, Mr. and Mrs. Harry T. Lowe, Dr. and Mrs. Arthur C. H. Friedmann, Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Wright, Mr. Edward E. Nichols.

Hallowe'en Dinner Party.

Hallowe'en night Mr. and Mrs. W. Kennon Jewett gave a delightful dinner party with the decorations indicative of the season. The large mantel [illegible] in the dining room was banked with cornstalks and pumpkins and within the grate was a witch enveloped in red fire. Potted chrysanthemums and palms, also jack-o-lanterns adorned all the apartments. The guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jewett were Mr. and Mrs. Henry Russell Wray, Mr. and Mrs. Henry R. At the same time they will be made interesting to the general music lover.

LEARNING.

Yet we must give the children leave to use
Our garden tools though they spoil tool and plant
In learning. So the Master may not scorn
Our awkwardness as with these bungling hands
We try to uproot the ill and plant with good
In barren soil, the child is learning
Perhaps the angels even are forbid
To laugh at us or may not care to laugh
With kind eyes pitying our little efforts
— Sill

Nor love thy life, nor hate, but what thou livest
Live well; how long or short permit to Heaven
— Milton

Oh, for the trust
Constance is harder than our enemies
Knows more [illegible]
Nor needs to question Rumor if we fall
Below the perfect model of our thought
— George Eliot

Cultivating Slimness

Fat women must take this injunction to heart: they want to be in style. For the new modes will not drape over a fat figure.

[illegible] quickly but without harm of course, and this means [illegible] be depended [illegible]. Exercising or dieting are too slow. The woman who wants to wear a clinging gown in style [illegible] should go to her druggist and get a case of Marmola Prescription Tablets, which sell at about 75 cents.

Taking one after each meal and at bedtime will be enough to bring her to the desired stage before the worst case is used up. It is hardly believable that such delightful results can be obtained without harm and for such a small sum of money, but then truth is stranger than fiction.

The effect of these tablets is getting a case yourself either from the Marmola Company, Detroit, Mich., or from your druggist. They are made in accordance with the famous Marmola Prescription and, consequently, can't have any ill effects.

BACK TO THE LAND.

Back to the Land, my brothers one and all!
Back to the land, with all thy heart and soul
Scatter fresh seeds where the moist furrows roll—
Hark how God speaks when the three thunders call!"
—Millie W. Carpenter, Pathfinder, Washington, D C

"My motto is 'Back to the Land—but not in the old way.'"
—Zulu Maud Woodhull, London Morning News

Yes, back to the Land, but not with the tools
Of the ancient days, and the era of fools,
But back to the plow propelled by the Sun
Which the brain of the race from its travail has won

Yes, back to the Land as the mist to the Sea
Where the mind may expand and the foot be free,
But back with the lightning, the ally of man,
That the form may be straight as the Infinite Plan

Yes, back to the Land with the waving of trees,
With the bloom of the rose and the buzzing of bees,
But back with the helpers of steel and of steam,
That life as a joy may be more than a dream

Yes, back to the Land from the city's mad din
To the land where to work is not sorrow and sin
Yes, come with a will that the will shall be less
That the sun and the soil and the seasons shall bless

Then to the Land! It is comfort and life,
We will lie on its breast and will cease from the strife
We will know of our God who is Mother of all
And will climb to the soul from the form of the fall

UNQUIET

Three things make the earth unquiet,
And four she cannot brook
The pious Agur counted them,
And put them in a book—
These four tremendous curses
With which mankind is curst
But a Servant when he Reigneth,
Old Agur counted first.

A Handmaid that is Mistress
We need not call upon
A Fool when he is full of Meat
Will fall asleep anon
An Odious Woman married
May bear a babe and mend
But a Servant when he Reigneth
Is Confusion to the end

His feet are swift to [illegible]
His hands are [illegible]
His ears are deaf to [illegible]
His lips are loud in [illegible]
And if his folly opens
The unnecessary hells
A Servant when he Reigneth
Throws the blame on some one else
— Rudyard Kipling

Hemming, Mrs. Irving Howbert, Miss May Howbert, Mrs. Jordan, Mrs. W. K. Jewett, Mrs. F. W. Kent, Mrs. Robert Kerr, Mrs. W. P. Kinney, Mrs. E. M. Marbourg, Mrs. D. P. Mayhew, Mrs. C. E. Noble, Mrs. J. R. Robinson, Mrs. W. F. Robinson, Mrs. P. H. Seldomridge, Mrs. W. F. Slocum, Mrs. S. E. Solly, Mrs. W. H. Spurgeon, Mrs. H. A. Smith, Mrs. P. B. Stewart, Miss Hattie Stewart, Mrs. William Strieby, Mrs. F. M. P. Taylor, Mrs. F. M. Woods, Miss Sarah Warren, Mrs. W. W. Williamson, Mrs. T. G. Waterman, Mrs. E. M. Wiley.

The annual address of Mrs. Hatch was as follows: "The work which has hitherto absorbed our efforts as an association has progressed quietly and steadily, as in other years. Our boarding home has prospered under the efficient management of our superintendent, Mrs. Goldie, whose devoted service we gladly recognize.

During the nine years that have passed since our work began, we have looked forward to the day when we might wisely extend our field of labor so far as to offer to the young women of our city the [illegible] Young Men's Christian association to its young men [illegible]. Such need has [illegible] the further [illegible].

In February Miss [illegible] Miss Hays, the national secretary in charge of the [illegible] work. Her public address [illegible] aroused [illegible] Young Women's Christian association [illegible] that the board of [illegible] not just [illegible] a general society which [illegible] such work as other [illegible] found most helpful [illegible].

Through the kind [illegible] we secured the services of Miss M[illegible]. The [illegible] the Women's [illegible] National Training School [illegible] secretaries [illegible].

Under her efficient [illegible] led by our educational committee, of which Mrs. F. E. Brooks is chairman, [illegible] has been organized in gymnastics, sewing, stenography, English grammar, English literature, French and Bible study.

A class in millinery will probably be added later and we earnestly hope [illegible] an attempt to form a class in cookery [illegible] science of home making. Other classes will be opened whenever [illegible] for [illegible] sufficient number of members.

We have secured the quarters at 418 DeGraff building, where we have the general secretary's office, a lunch room and a large room suitable for the noon rest, for religious services, classes and social gatherings. The noon rest is open from [illegible] until 2 o'clock each noon to all members of the association and business women [illegible] specially invited to bring their luncheon and have a quiet, restful hour and a cup of hot coffee or tea if they desire it.

The association hopes to be able soon to install the travelers' department which other cities have found so helpful to inexperienced young girls and women with children traveling alone.

We are looking forward with pleasant anticipation to a series of talks on hygiene, travel, art, Bible study and mission work. These addresses will be made by Dr. Craighead, Mrs. Slocum, Dean Parsons, Dr. Howard Agnew Johnston and others.

We have nineteen life members, one hundred and thirty-two associate and sixty sustaining members. Through efforts now in progress we look for a largely increased membership within a short time.

In order to do well the work we need for the coming year we shall need the sum of $[illegible] and for this we look with confidence to the Christian people of Colorado Springs. To all who have in any way contributed to our success during the last year we offer cordial thanks. We feel that especial appreciation is due to those who have so generously consented to take charge of our classes in addition to their own daily work.

Our teachers at present are Miss Fitze, Miss Miller, Miss Matilda McAllister, Mrs. Reinhardt and Professor Pattison.

We have yet much work before us. An increased membership, a new boarding home that will give to each woman a room alone, an administration building containing a gymnasium, an auditorium, a reading room and ample space for offices and class rooms are immediate needs. To accomplish all this will be difficult but let us take to ourselves the spirit of the words of a modern Christian worker: "Do not look for easy tasks, which is the portion of babes, not of men. Seek for tasks hard to be done, the doing of which strength is required, and in the doing of which strength will come."

The report of the treasurer, Mrs. Strieby, shows that the total expenditures for the year were $4,962.69, of which only $1,795.12 was paid out in salaries. The payment on the loan and interest was $1,240. The total receipts were $7,414.79, of which $5,981.15 was credited to the house receipts. The balance in the treasury to date is $512.10.

Annual reports were made by the chairmen of the committees. Mrs. H. P. Farnsworth finance gave approximate amounts. Mrs. F. E. Brooks, educational, reviewed the work accomplished in forming classes. Mrs. Hatch gave a verbal report for Miss Brinley of the house committee as she is out of the city. Monthly meetings of the committee have been held and the property is in good condition. Mrs. C. E. Noble, religious, reported that the usual religious meetings had been held each evening at the home. Prayer meetings Wednesday evenings led by the clergy and others. Hereafter there will be a mid-week meeting every Wednesday evening in the Y. W. C. A. rooms in the DeGraff building. Mrs. Robert Kerr, literature, reported the donation of the city daily papers and magazines to the headquarters and that there was on card $[illegible] for the purchase of magazines [illegible]. Miss D[illegible] reported the dime social party Saturday night at headquarters. The need for a piano has been temporarily supplied as Mrs. A. H. Harris has proffered the loan of a piano until the completion of the new Protestant hospital, when it is to become the property of the hospital.

Colorado Springs Needlework Guild.

The annual reception and exhibition of garments of the Colorado Springs branch of the Needlework Guild of America was held Thursday afternoon in St. Stephen's church, with the president, Miss Sarah H. Dorsey, and the other general officers receiving.

The directors displayed nearly 1,000 new warm new garments and as several of the directors are still to be heard from when they return to the city, it is thought that the number of garments this year will be towards 1,200. The distribution began on Friday, and the hearts of many were gladdened when they received the garments, as they were so great [illegible]. Quite a sum of money was subscribed by the philanthropic citizens and this will be wisely expended for the needy. The annual meeting for the election of officers will be held early in December.

Under the direction of Miss Isabel Carr an excellent program was rendered Thursday afternoon. Mrs. William Baroer gave readings, Mrs. H. H. Seldomridge sang and Miss Ely played piano solos.

Congress of Mothers' Bazaar

The immediate needs of the Congress of Mothers for funds with which to further their various enterprises has compelled them to make the venture of the three large bazaars to be held in December. There are urgent requests from all sections of the country for help in organizing the work for childhood.

National Congress of Mothers' Bazaars.

The National Congress of Mothers, whose work is for the welfare of the child, will hold bazaars in Philadelphia, Cleveland and Los Angeles, December 2, 3, and 4. The Congress needs $10,000 to complete the work it has begun on behalf of mothers and children. Thousands of women who cannot contribute money can give their handiwork. Fancy work, household articles of all kinds, children's garments, aprons, toys, dolls, preserves, jellies, candies, books and pictures are desired. Colorado contributions may be sent to Miss Hypatia Hooper at the Evans school or 417 Downing avenue, Denver.

Among the innumerable cheap periodicals of today, the magazine issued by the National Congress of Mothers is unique in its scope and character. It is the mouthpiece of the mothers of the land and its pages are filled with their garnered wisdom, experience and expedients. It is also the official organ of the Congress and the bazaars to be held in December are designed to place the publication on a firm financial basis, as well as assist all other Congress philanthropies. Many of our Colorado women are contributors to the Congress magazine. Mrs. Isabella E. Hinds, 1064 Clarkson street, Denver, has charge of Colorado subscriptions.

The village of Dunkirk, N. Y., has a coming aerial inventor. Despite the fact that he has twice fallen and broken his bones Casimir Plenerski, 14 years old, is determined to perfect an airship. A year ago a balloon of his own manufacture dragged him across a meadow into a barbed wire fence. Recently he fell from a high roof while testing a home made parachute. And he says he'll try again as soon as he leaves the hospital!

Short coats, long coats, and Norfolk jackets may now all be had in leather.

Household Hints

The housewife who aspires to have a full pickle and preserve closet begins early in the spring and as each fruit or vegetable comes along, she places a sample, ample or otherwise, on her shelves. The early berries are gone and in the season until grapes and peaches she keeps her eyes open for "something different." Plums are a temptation, and as they are not acceptable to many as plain canned fruit, she might try:

Pickled Plums.

Pack jars with any rather tart plums, sprinkle bits of stick cinnamon, cloves and now and then a small shred of mace. Have all ready a syrup made in the proportion of four pounds of sugar to one quart of vinegar. During the pickle season it is wise to have a large quantity of this syrup, rather thick, always on hand, as it saves time. Fill the jars with the syrup, place in the preserving kettle on a thick cloth, fill the kettle with cold water as for canning, and bring to a boil. Have rubber rings already on, and tops screwed tightly in place. After 20 minutes' boiling remove from the kettle of water, tightening rings, and they are ready to set away. This does away with the old method of reheating the vinegar several times and pouring over, which was simply a method of cooking long enough without destroying the shape of the fruit. The same method can be used with sweet pickled peaches. Melon sweet pickles, however, must be made differently, as they require more cooking to make them tender, and more manipulation to make them good. The old methods of soaking watermelon rinds in salt for three days, thereafter freshening in cold water, was a long and tedious process, but at the same time in no other way could the wild flavor be removed. A later method of preserving is as follows:

Melon Preserves.

Cut off all the green rind and see that none of the soft pulp is left. The white part may be cut into fancy shapes if one chooses, but it is a waste of time. Small slices have been found the most palatable. Soak over night in a mixture of vinegar and water in equal parts. Drain off next day and preserve in the proportion of a pound to a pound, adding a pint of water to each two pounds of fruit. A lemon sliced for each two pounds adds to the flavor. The fruit must simmer slowly till it is a clear golden color, and the syrup is thick. Will keep in unsealed stone jars.

It is hardly necessary to give receipts for tomatoes, but if you have never tried the lard method, perhaps it would be well to try it now. In the days when lard was not so high it was an easy and inexpensive way to have fresh tomatoes when the snow was flying. Now it is not quite so inexpensive, but even now it will make winter tomatoes cheaper than hot house tomatoes, and a whole lot better.

Select very fine, smooth tomatoes with skins unbroken. This last is imperative or you will have a failure. Pour melted paraffin in the hollow left by stem. Melt a layer of lard in the bottom of a stone jar. When cold, place your tomatoes on it, not allowing them to touch. Pour softened lard over them, and place where this layer will harden. Continue till the top of the jar is reached, cover with a parafined paper and a plate weighted, and place in a dry, cool place. To use, wipe off the lard, scald and remove skin, and serve as any fresh tomato.

Canning Tomatoes.

If you have trouble in keeping canned tomatoes try this method. Select small tomatoes that will go into the cans whole, peel only enough to fill two cans at a time. Have a kettle full of tomatoes simmered to a pulp and strained. When this pulp is boiling drop in your tomatoes and cook until tender, lift carefully into the cans, fill with the boiling juice and seal in the usual way. These retain their flavor better than if salt is added while cooking.

If the pantry is large enough it will save time and temper to go over the list of spices, sugar, vinegar, etc., that will be used during the catsup making and preserving season and see that everything is of the best and that the supply is adequate. It is no economy to buy bargains in spices. The best is the only rule. Brown sugar and white should be bought in quantities to last through the season. The different kinds of vinegar carefully labelled. Tarragon vinegar and dill vinegar can both be made at home by simply boiling the leaves in vinegar. All these things if done when there is a rift in the busy housekeeper's days will save her much worry and loss of time, and that is the great thing in doing housework. Make your head save your feet is one of the wise old sayings that our grandmothers have handed down to us, but most of us seem to think that means "get out of as much as you can." To get through the housework, season after season, with the least worry and the most success watch the corners and keep everlastingly at it. I do not mean work all the time but to keep all the small matters up all the time and put your mind into your work when you are doing it. I always look with suspicion on the story of the woman who has a book over the sink or a newspaper pinned up beyond the ironing board. I do not think she ever did anything well. She would much better get her mind on her work and get it done and out of the way and then read or study, but I have shrewd suspicion that she was deceiving herself into the belief that she was not neglecting the work while she was cultivating her mind, and perhaps she felt a little vanity over her struggle not to drop out of the literary lists, else how do we come to hear of her? One thing at a time and put your mind and heart in it and you will get the best results for yourself and those about you.

During the government fiscal year ending July 31, 1098, 10,134,485 gallons of denatured alcohol were produced and consumed in the United States. As a motor fuel it possesses many advantages over gasoline, although with the present motor designs it is more difficult to start an engine with it than with gasoline. This, however, is a purely mechanical difficulty which engineers say can be easily overcome.

S.S.S. FOR RHEUMATISM

Rheumatism is caused by an excess of uric acid in the blood, which gradually gets into the circulation because of indigestion, constipation, weak kidney action, and other irregularities of the system which are sometimes considered of no importance. This uric acid causes an inflamed and irritated condition of the blood, and the circulation instead of nourishing the different portions of the body, continually deposits into the nerves, muscles, tissues and joints, the irritating, pain-producing acid with which it is filled. Rheumatism can only be cured by a thorough cleansing of the blood, and this is just what S. S. S. does. It goes down into the circulation, and by neutralizing the uric acid and driving it from the blood, effectually and surely removes the cause. S. S. S. strengthens and invigorates the blood so that instead of a weak, sour stream, causing pain and agony thoughout the system, it becomes an invigorating, nourishing fluid, furnishing health and vigor to every part of the body and relieving the suffering caused by this disease. S. S. S. being a purely vegetable blood purifier, is the surest and safest cure for Rheumatism in any of its forms. Book on Rheumatism and any medical advice desired sent free to all who write.

The Victim of Drink

Some of the best men in the world have been victims of drink, and if there is not some member in your family that is afflicted with this disease, you are indeed fortunate.

Drink cunningly destroys the will power, and while the drunkard wants to do what you tell him, he wants a thousand times more the drink that he craves. Medical treatment is necessary to destroy the craving, and this Orrine will do.

It destroys the desire for liquor, so that the drink will not be missed, also cures the deranged digestion, weakened nerves and other ill effects of excessive drinking, restoring the patient to perfect health.

The Week's Offerings

Monday, "Peer Gynt."

Louis James will be seen in Ibsen's only comedy at the Opera House tomorrow evening. He is supported by a good company, including Miss Aphie James. He has the entire original Mansfield production, which is said to be one of the most stupendous settings ever put on the stage.

Tuesday, "The Chorus Lady."

Rose Stahl, in one of the biggest metropolitan successes of recent years, "The Chorus Lady," comes here Tuesday. Miss Stahl's impersonation of the chorus girl has won her great praise. She is supported by practically her entire New York company. This is one of the few one-night stands she plays, as she goes to London in March.

STAGELAND

The Week's Offerings

Friday, "The Alaskan."

The return of this musical comedy, which pleased local theatergoers last year, will doubtless be good news for those who like this kind of entertainment. Edward Martindel is still playing Totem Pole Pete. The balance of the company contains several people well known in musical comedy circles.

Saturday, "A Knight for a Day."

Bobby Barry, seen here last when "Little Johnny Jones" first came to town, and Elsie Herbert, head the company which will be seen in this musical comedy Saturday evening. "A Knight for a Day" comes here with the stamp of approval set on it by New York, Boston and Chicago.

GERTRUDE HUTCHESON,

Prima Donna With the Merry Musical Comedy, "A Knight for a Day," Which Comes to the Opera House, Saturday.

THE present week offers theatergoers a variety of entertainment, ranging from the most serious to the most frivolous. Four attractions are offered, which is unusual for this city, as they are all high-class, and any one would ordinarily suffice for a single week. Louis James with his big production of "Peer Gynt," exactly as offered in this country three years ago by the late Richard Mansfield; Rose Stahl in one of the biggest Broadway successes of recent years, "The Chorus Lady"; "The Alaskan," a musical comedy which pleased local amusement seekers greatly last year; and the New York-Chicago-Boston musical comedy success, "A Knight for a Day," all come this week.

Of course the event of the week is Louis James in Ibsen's great comedy-drama, "Peer Gynt." This is one of Ibsen's early dramas, and was not written for the stage. It was only after much solicitation on the part of his admirers that the great writer consented to a stage production of "Peer Gynt." He himself prepared the version used in Norway, and unmercifully cut the original drama for that purpose.

When the drama was first produced in this country by Richard Mansfield in October, 1905, Mansfield arranged his own version from William Archer's translation. He restored much of the original drama to Ibsen's stage version. Louis James has followed the Mansfield version closely, but has added two or three scenes, which greatly help in the following out of this life-story of the dreaming youth, Peer Gynt. James offers the complete Mansfield scenic production, which at the time Mansfield appeared in the drama, caused no end of praise for its elaborateness and beauty.

"Peer Gynt" is the only comedy Ibsen ever wrote. Living, as he then was, under the sunny skies of Italy, he was more at peace with the world than ever before or afterwards. "Peer Gynt" is the life story of a lad of the north, or of the south, the west or the east, for that matter, for there are many Peer Gynts in this world. Peer was a dreamer as a youth and caused much trouble to his poor old mother, Ase. He runs off with the bride at a wedding feast and takes her into the mountains and there deserts her. While wandering about in the mountains, Peer has strange adventures. He falls asleep and dreams of the trolls, the fantastic creatures of Norwegian folk-lore.

Returning homewards, he builds himself a hut, and to him comes Solveig, with whom he has fallen in love, and who loves him dearly. Solveig gives up everything to come to Peer, as Peer, after having stolen the bride, Ingrid, is an outlaw. Peer deserts Solveig in turn to go out into the world to become a Kaiser. On his way towards the new country—for his end in view is America—he visits his mother. In a beautiful scene, so full of the spirit of Peer's early life with his mother, he sees his mother die. It is here that Ibsen's great genius is apparent. A more effective scene was never put upon the stage.

This ends the first part of Peer's life. Leaving Norway as a youth, he is next found in Africa, a prosperous business man, having earned much money at slave trading in America. Peer meets with many adventures. His friends steal his ship with all his wealth, leaving him stranded on the shore. He comes upon a horse with a fancy Arabic costume. Donning this, he is taken for a prophet by Anitra and her maidens. Anitra in turn, woman-like, first coquets with Peer and then robs him of his jewels.

Again stranded, Peer starts a tour of the world, still looking for his Kaiserdom, which he was about to grasp when his ship was stolen from him. He goes through many odd experiences, and finally turns homewards. He is wrecked near the coast of Norway, and instead of returning there a wealthy merchant as he had dreamed, he comes a beggar. Proceeding on his way, Peer comes to his old hut in the mountains. Solveig, still faithful, awaits him, and Peer, now a decrepit old man, realizes for the first time, that his Kaiserdom was not to be found in the world, but in the arms of his faithful sweetheart, Solveig. And so he dies.

This is the tale Ibsen tells in his beautiful drama of "Peer Gynt." There is nothing mysterious about it; nothing that anyone with ordinary intelligence can not understand. It is a character drawing which must be read to be appreciated. The drama is full of satire on prevailing conditions. It is a wonderful piece of dramatic literature and should be read by all who anticipate seeing James' production tomorrow evening.

James is supported by a good company. His wife, Aphie James, plays the faithful Solveig, and has won considerable praise from the press for her work. Laura Frankenfield is Ase, the doting mother. There is an interesting anecdote in regard to this character in the Mansfield production. Miss Emma Dunn was appearing in the part, and the press praised her work, sometimes to Mansfield's disadvantage. Mansfield became jealous of her repeated praises, and took his vengeance out in a singular way. There is a scene in which Peer slaps his mother on the back. Miss Dunn claims that Mansfield hit her unmercifully hard, and later sued him for it, claiming that he did her permanent injury.

What Press Agents Say

LOUIS JAMES IN "PEER GYNT."

The preeminent success of the dramatic season is Louis James' great performance and production of Henrik Ibsen's spectacular comedy of human life, "Peer Gynt," which comes here tomorrow evening. Here is a work of art by poet-dramatist and art-actor, which does not qualify merely as an artistic triumph; it is a popular triumph as well, for there is something for everyone and everything for some in the myriad phases of "Peer Gynt." Here is Mr. James' own "brief" of the play:

PART ONE—ACT I.

Scene 1—Peer Gynt at his home in the mountains with his mother. This scene displays Peer Gynt as the untamed mind, the unconscious dreamer, poet and reckless hobbledehoy. It also indicates his aspirations to be a leader among men.

Scene 2—Peer Gynt attends the wedding festivities at Hegstadt, and meets Solveig. He is poor and shabby, but striding and dreaming of great things. He is scoffed at and derided by all. He becomes more and more reckless, drinks to excess, and thinking himself slighted by Solveig, with whom he has fallen in love, he steals the bride Ingrid out of sheer bravado and escapes to the mountains with her.

ACT II.

Scene 1—Sick of the adventure he curtly dismisses Ingrid. He is hunted by the farmers and peasants, and completely exhausted and worn out by the fatigue and dissipation, sinks into a stupor.

Scene 2—In his distorted fancy he is visited by the Dovre King's daughter, and goes with her to the court of the King of Trolls. Crying to his mother for help, the Trolls flee, and Peer Gynt is left alone in the darkness, to an encounter with the Great Boyg. The liquor's effect passing off, he awakes and finds Solveig and her little sister Helga watching him, but they flee and he is again left alone.

ACT III.

Scene 1—Peer Gynt, undaunted, builds himself a hut, and, outlawed, prepares to lead the life of a hermit, but Solveig, who has loved him at first sight, comes to him in the forest to dwell with him there. Gynt's dream of happiness is dispelled by the appearance of the Dovre King's daughter, who threatens to ever stand between him and Solveig, and hopelessly discouraged, Peer departs, bidding her wait for him.

Scene 2—Seeking for comfort, Peer returns to his mother's hut, only to find her dying. Leaving her dead, he fares across seas.

PART TWO—ACT IV.

Scene 1 (A Vision)—Thirty years have elapsed, and Solveig is disclosed waiting and ever waiting for Peer.

Scene 2—Peer has become very wealthy, and a man of the world. He visits the coast of Morocco with a band of friends. He announces to them his intention to become emperor of the world, but they steal his yacht and leave him. The yacht is destroyed. Peer, meantime, has fallen a victim to the wiles of Anitra, a dancing girl, who has stolen his wealth and sent him adrift. She celebrates her conquest in a dance and song, accompanied by her troupe of maiden attendants.

ACT V.

Scene 1—Embarking on a Norwegian vessel, bound for his old home, his ship encounters a violent storm, and strikes a rock and sinks. Peer has grown old and worn, and for the first time meets the dread messenger.

Scene 2—An auction is in progress near the old cottage, and thither Peer Gynt comes after the shipwreck, feeble and almost demented. All his dreams and aspirations are now threadbare. He encounters his old friends, the Dovre King and the Button Moulder, and in vain searches everywhere for rest and salvation. From the old hut, Solveig comes to him, and in her love he finally finds refuge, peace and happiness.

This phantasmagoria, or comedy of human life, embraces all the elements of the serious, the pathetic, the tragic, the grotesque, the real and the unreal, the actualities and the dreams, the facts and the consequences, the ambitions and the disappointments, the hopes and the disillusions, and the dread and the terror, and the resurrection, in love, of the human soul.

PATRICIA O'BRIEN'S DRESS

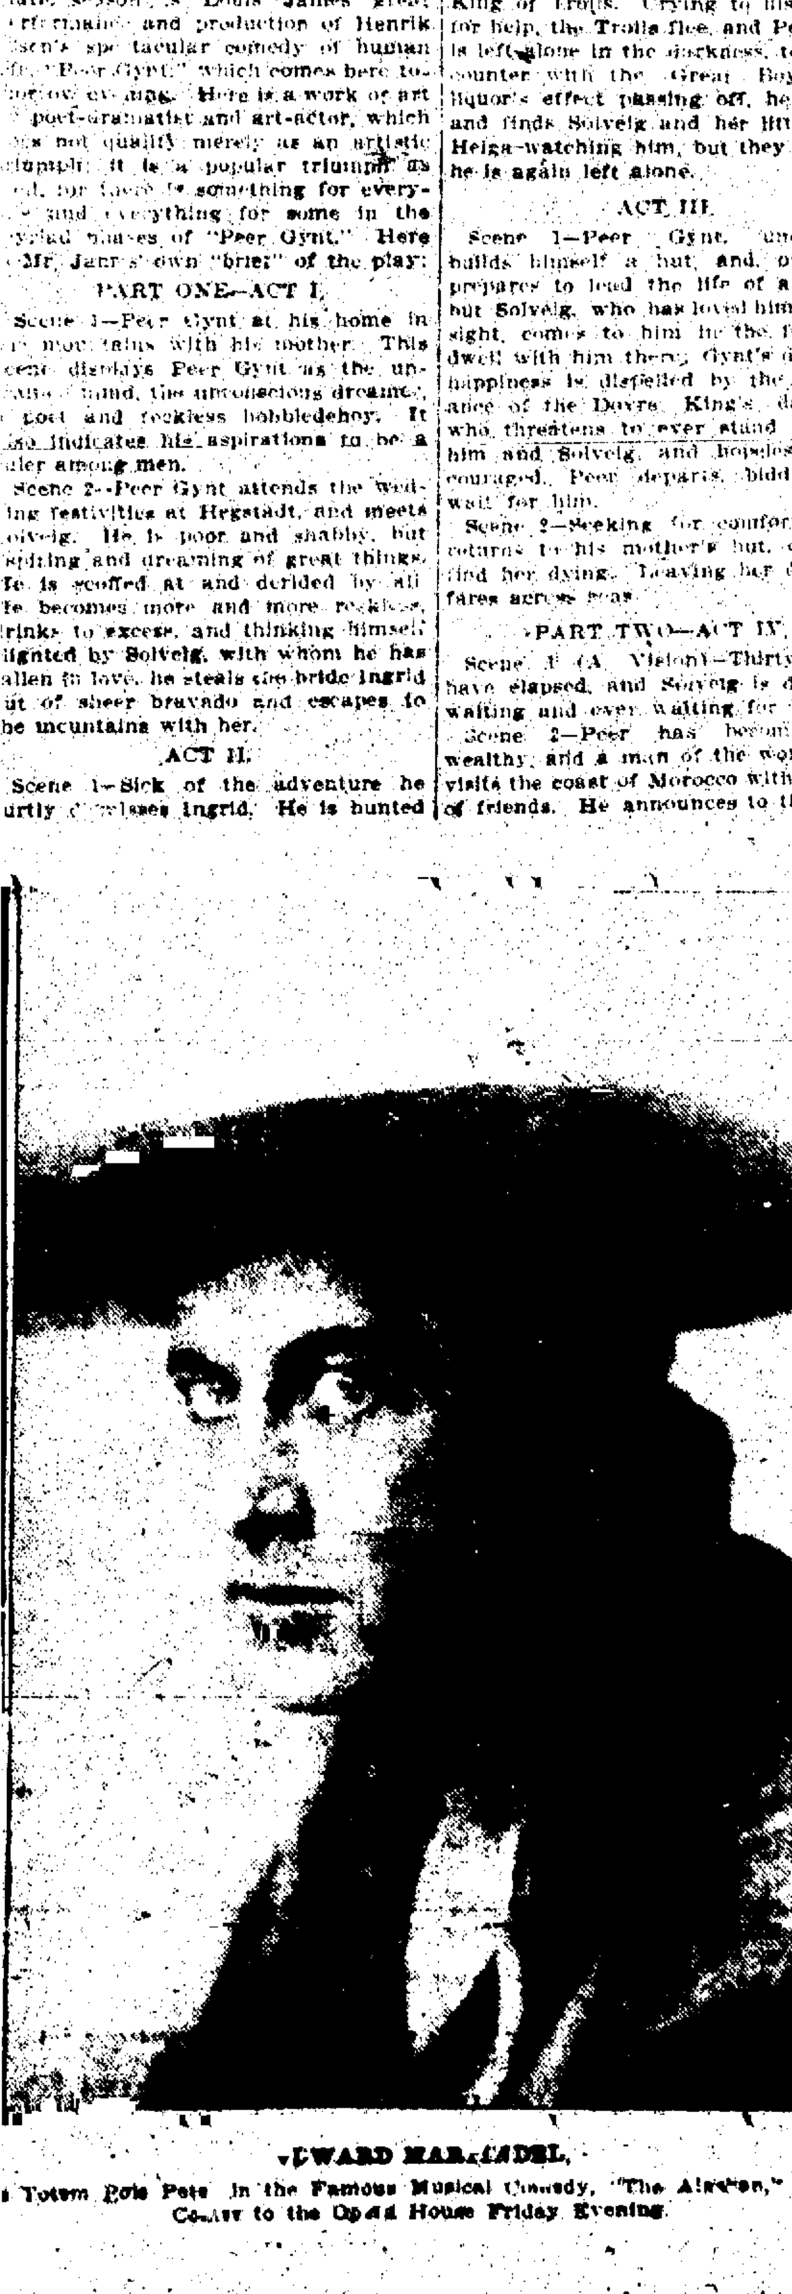

Because of a superstitious belief that it is unlucky to discard anything that has figured in a stage success, Rose Stahl as Patricia O'Brien in "The Chorus Lady," which comes to the Opera House Tuesday, is today wearing the same dress which she used in the original sketch four years ago and it has done duty not only in America but in England, Scotland and Ireland. The skirt, which is one of cheap satin, boasts a dozen patches, while the tan dress, which is a part of the costume, has been relined eight times. The costume has been copied for bazaar dolls on several occasions. It has also done service for amateur imitations by society women more times than can be remembered. When Cecilia Loftus was giving her impersonation of Patricia O'Brien at Weber's theater in New York, she discovered just previous to her initial performance that the costume could not be duplicated, so she wrote a letter to Miss Stahl asking her if she might borrow the costume each night after the first act of "The Chorus Lady." This was agreed to, and each evening the maid went in a cab to Hackett's theater, New York, where Miss Stahl was playing, and directly Miss Stahl had got out of the costume in the dressing room it was hastily put bundled into a box, put into the cab and returned post haste to Weber's theater, where the whole outfit was donned by Miss Loftus in order to give her famous impersonation of Patricia O'Brien.

EDWARD MARTINDEL IN "THE ALASKAN"

Edward Martindel, who is being featured in John Cort's splendid opera "The Alaskan," which comes to the Opera house Friday evening, is a comparative beginner in the musical line, yet is already recognized as the best basso in the entire field. Mr. Martindel has only been on the stage six years, yet in that time he has scored notably with some of our best musical operas. Six years ago he started at the very bottom of the ladder in the chorus of the Lulu Glaser company—yet before the end of his first season he was singing the principal role in her opera, the opportunity presenting itself through the illness of the artist engaged for that part. As Mr. Martindel has expressed it—he was never stage struck, and never too proud to admit that he was once way back in the back line of extra men of the male chorus.

Following his engagement with Miss Glaser, Mr. Martindel was for three years with Henry W. Savage in principal parts in musical plays. He was also with John C. Fisher's production of "The Princess of Kensington," was the real big hit in New York for eight weeks with "Mexicana" when presented by the Shuberts at the Lyric theater, and when "The Alaskan" was presented one year ago on Broadway at the Knickerbocker theater he scored such a tremendous success by his rendition of the now famous basso song "My Totem Pole" that he became almost the talk of the music world. After the first performance of "The Alaskan" John Cort secured his services for five years to appear solely under his management and at the end of his engagement with the present company Mr. Cort intends to place him at the head of another big musical piece now being held in reserve for his use.

During the past summer Mr. Cort temporarily loaned the services of Mr. Martindel and he appeared at Wallack's theater, New York, in "The Gay Musician," for seven weeks and once more made a pronounced Broadway hit. That he possesses dramatic talents out of the ordinary, is evident for during his engagement in New York he was visited by one of the most prominent managers in America who offered to star him in a play to be especially written for him if he would be willing to forsake the operatic field, but as his contract with Mr. Cort was binding and he is partial to musical presentations he was pleased to decline the compliment.

EDWARD MARTINDEL,

As Totem Pole Pete in the Famous Musical Comedy, "The Alaskan," Which Comes to the Opera House Friday Evening.

"A KNIGHT FOR A DAY."

"A Knight for a Day," the merry musical comedy that has had such a vogue at the Whitney Opera house, Chicago, Wallack's theater, New York, and the Tremont theater, Boston, comes to the Opera house on Saturday evening with a splendid cast and stage equipment. The first scene of the play is laid in Evanston, Ill., and the second scene on the island of Corsica. "A Knight for a Day" is a musical comedy of the customary kind as regards both manner and matter, but it is an uncommonly good entertainment, and the admirer of tuneful music, abundant fun-making and dashing, strenuous stage movement will have nothing to regret if he patronizes the performance. The music is among the best that Mr. Hubbell has placed to his credit, and he is already quoted high in the musical comedy market. He has written a succession of tunes, all of which will be whistled, and he has orchestrated them with taste and fantasy which add to their effectiveness and give them a value above that possessed by those of the average musical comedy score. "I'd Like Another Situation," "Life is a See-Saw," "The Little Girl in Blue," "I'm Married Now," and "Whistle When You Walk Out" all will know the widespread popularity that is enjoyed by catchy music of this variety. One of the enjoyable features of this entertainment is the American Beauty chorus which adds greatly to the charm and tunefulness of the piece. The cast is headed by Bobby Barry and Elsie Herbert, whose reputations are too well known by their excellent work in musical comedies to need comment. The production is being shot on under the management of Mr. H. H. Frazee, who has given it a sumptuous scenic equipment.

GRAND OPENING OF THE EMPIRE MONDAY NIGHT

When the new Empire theater opens its doors tomorrow night the public is going to see the prettiest, coziest and most convenient little vaudeville theater in the state of Colorado. The predominating colors in the house decorations are a rich Turkish red and a delicate pink, trimmed with gold, while the carpets and tapestries are deep [illegible] king as an attractive combination as can be imagined. The lower floor seating arrangements and prices will remain as they have been for some weeks past. The balcony chairs along the sides will be reserved at 20 cents and the upstairs boxes at 25 cents, while for the rear seats the regular admission price, 10 cents, will be charged.

In honor of the opening an exceptionally attractive program has been arranged; it will be a bill of headliners throughout. The first topnotcher is Thomas R. Curtis and Ella Wilson and company, in a one act comedy playlet, "What Happened to Brown." The plot of the sketch is a novel one, running over with comedy situations and laughable lines—a vehicle of merriment that will just suit the fastidious tastes of Colorado Springs' critical amusement public.

The second headliner who will grace the boards of the new Empire is Mylie and Orth, lately from a starring tour in the "Isle of Spice." They will be seen in a travesty sketch called "The Manager," replete with songs of the latest creation and dances of an extraordinary sprightly caliber. It is this team that captured theatergoers throughout by virtue of the genuinely clever performance rendered, so it is hardly necessary to say they are going to make a pronounced hit at the Empire.

Hevoy and Beaumont, than whom there is not better team of entertainers in the theatrical profession, come direct from a successful tour of Keith and Proctor's circuit and will present this week a comedy turn that is bound to meet with approval. It is an original act, new and novel in every respect.

Professor Gordon has something entirely new in the line of moving pictures and for next week will present two films that have never been seen in these parts before. Miss Mandy Barackman, the Empire's popular illustrator, will be heard in "When the Roses Bloom Again," with a beautiful set of slides.

The first performance Monday night will begin at 8:00 o'clock. The management requests that reservations be made early in the day to avoid the box office rush upon opening the theater.

CHANGE OF MANAGEMENT OF THE CRYSTAL THEATER

Messrs. Moore and Greaves, owners of the Crystal theater, have secured the services of Mr. C. M. Cummings of Denver who will take charge of this theater tomorrow. Mr. Cummings and family come to Colorado Springs well recommended and will make this their future home. Mr. Cummings, in looking over the situation, decides that in order to give the people of Colorado Springs a first-class show of this kind it will be necessary to make the price of admission as it formerly was: 10 cents, and children 5 cents.

He has already arranged for special music, both instrumental and vocal. Mrs. Johnson, Denver's foremost illustrated song singer, formerly of the Novelty theater, has been engaged for the coming week.

Only the very latest and best songs will be used and the instrumental music will be of the highest quality. As soon as the new pictures are released by the makers they will be shown here so that there is no chance of the same picture being seen twice. Tuesday and Thursday afternoons have been selected as souvenir matinees and very handsome souvenirs will be given away to the ladies. The manager wishes to state that the instrumental musicians will be recognized members of the A. F. of M. For further information see Crystal Ad and program.

"WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD," AT FAIRYLAND THIS WEEK

Local theatergoers will no doubt remember "When Knights Were Bold," as presented last April at the Opera House, by Francis Wilson, one of the most clever comedians of the present day. When it is taken into consideration that never before had Mr. Wilson appeared to so good an advantage as in this vehicle, the high character of the piece is at once recognized. It abounds in striking situations, funny in the extreme, and each of these is faithfully portrayed in the film story, given at Fairyland. If you have seen Mr. Wilson in this play, you will want to see the pictures; if you did see him, you will not miss this opportunity of refixing in your mind the many unique situations which characterize this play and make it one of the best comedies seen in this city last season.

In writing the piece, the author, Charles Marlowe, has chosen to satirize the love of ancestry which afflicts so many people of the present day. The hero, Sir Guy de Vere, a young Englishman who has just succeeded to the estates and titles of a long line of titled ancestors, is censured by his associates, and particularly his sweetheart, Lady Rowena Eggington, because of his faint resemblance, both in feature and action, to his honored forbears. With this chiding weighing on his mind, Sir Guy, by the aid of whisky and water, taken to break up a severe cold, is borne into dreamland and the twelfth century, where, maintaining his own ultra modern personality, his experiences with the other characters who, to carry out the contrast of the two periods—separated 700 years are present as their own ancestral prototypes. The comic possibilities of such a situation are obvious. None of the mirth is lost in the picture presentation at Fairyland, which requires a film 1,900 feet in length. This alone is worth much more than the price of admission, but it is only one of many good things. Two other dramas, "The Dear Little Heart" and "Guy Fawks," are equally entertaining. Among the funny films are "Chief of Police's Gallant Outing" and "Embarrassing Gift." "Japanese Phantasy," a beautiful hand-colored mystery picture, is a feature.

Since vaudeville has been introduced at Fairyland, no better entertainer has been presented than Happy Doc Holland, a blackface song and dance artist, who comes direct from the east on his way to the Western coast. Mr. G. W. Brand, whose pleasing voice has drawn many a person to Fairyland, will sing "Bye and Bye."

Taken as a whole, the bill offered the fore part of this week is one of the best that has been booked at Fairyland this season. The admission is 10 cents to any part of the house. Children, 5 cents. Continuous performance, 2 to 5:30, 7 to 10:30 p. m.

JAPHET IN SEARCH OF A FATHER

A CLASSIC IN A PAGE

BY CAPTAIN FREDERICK MARRYAT

1792 – 1848

COPYRIGHT, 1908, BY J. W. MULLER. ALL RIGHTS RESERVED.

This novel followed the very successful one of "Jacob Faithful," and Marryat promised that in it he would quit the sea and find his hero among folk ashore. The promise was kept. Japhet never goes to sea and there is not a sea character in the whole story.

Though Marryat departed from the field peculiarly his own, he succeeded so well with his readers that while the story was running serially an American vessel signaled to a British one in mid-Atlantic: "Has Japhet found his father yet?"

HE BECAME A JUGGLER WITH MELCHIOR

"THIS child was born in wedlock. He is to be named Japhet. When circumstances permit, he will be reclaimed."

This note was attached to the infant that was left one night at the Foundling hospital. A bank note for 50 pounds was inclosed in the letter. Thus Japhet was introduced as one of superior sort, and as he grew and became an extraordinarily fine looking lad every one in the hospital became more and more convinced that he was of good birth and that some day great people would claim him.

Circumstances, however, apparently did not permit his being reclaimed. He grew to be 14 and no one had inquired for him. Then the value of the 50 pounds appeared. Instead of binding his apprentice to some trade, the governors of the hospital, who had laid the money by for him at interest, now used it to install him in the apothecary's shop of Mr. Phineas Cophagus, who engaged to train him for the profession.

Assenting to the request in the note, the governors had given him the Christian name of Japhet. For a surname they selected the name "Newlands," because that happened to be the name of the bank official whose signature ornamented the 50-pound note.

An ever more simple way had been used by the overseers in the poorhouse to christen another lad whom Mr. Cophagus had taken in as errand boy. He was named after the workhouse pump, which had the name of Timothy Oldmixon on it as maker. As soon as he was old enough he was assigned to the duty of pumping the water. "Few sons worked their father more or disliked him so much," said Timothy with a grin when Japhet was installed in the shop.

The two lads became close friends very quickly, but it was a friendship in which Japhet was the patron, while Timothy was the admiring and respectful subordinate. There are castes everywhere, even among foundlings. Timothy felt assured that his own parents were not persons worth finding and he felt equally assured that the 50 pounds and the mysterious letter guaranteed Japhet's parents as something aristocratic.

Japhet, for his part, was convinced of it. His mind had occupied itself with reflections over his parentage from the time he could think, and when he entered the apothecary's shop he was firmly convinced that some day he would be claimed by people who would give him the rank of gentleman.

Gradually the mystery of his birth became his one subject of thought and care. He spoke about it constantly; and, though Mr. Cophagus would say: "Good boy—very good boy—don't want a father," whenever the question was put to him, Japhet did want a father more and more every day until it became an obsession.

Happily, the governors of the Foundling hospital had given him an excellent education and a training that made him ambitious to learn more. Therfore, he studied steadily and soon made himself an efficient apothecary.

He saved the small sums that came into his hands like a miser, determined that he would go out into the world and seek for his father as soon as his time with Mr. Cophagus expired. Circumstances brought this about sooner than he expected. Mr. Cophagus sold his shop, and after giving Japhet 20 pounds and Timothy five, offered to get new positions for them.

Japhet declined and announced that he would set out in search of his father; and Timothy declared that he would go with Japhet as companion, friend or servant, whichever his patron might prefer.

They set forth with their bundles. "The wise men came from the east," said Japhet. "They must have gone toward the west, then. Let us go in that direction."

It was a random journey, and, as random journeys always do, brought them to adventure sooner than if they had gone forth scientifically to seek it. They struck a bargain with a wagoner for a ride in his covered cart and there met a strolling little band—a dark, sunburned, tall fellow, very handsome, with beautiful teeth and brilliant eyes black as coal, who introduced himself as Melchior, and his two companions, one a little fat boy who tumbled for the villagers' sport and the other a lanky lad who played the fool, and very successfully, since he was one by nature.

Melchior soon learned from Japhet and Timothy who and what they were. "You are just the people I want," said he, "and if you join me you shall not suffer."

When they assented, he told them that he was married to a gypsy woman and that through her he had great power in the tribe, though he did not often join in their wanderings, but engaged in undertakings of his own.

Nattee, his wife, made them welcome to the tribe. She was of the highest type of true blooded gypsy beauty, her face clear olive and perfectly oval, her eyes jetty black, her nose straight and beautifully formed, and her mouth small and proud. She was plainly of immense influence in the tribe, and as soon as she approved of the newcomers they were accepted without objection by the rest.

With Melchior and Nattee there was a little girl of about 11, who was strikingly different from them. She was a little fairy figure, with a wonderfully pure skin, light auburn hair, and large blue eyes. The tribe addressed her as Fleta.

Japhet at once suspected that Fleta had been stolen, though Melchior told him that she had been left behind by a soldier whom the tribe had found dying by the roadside. When Japhet questioned Fleta, who soon became his great admirer, she said that she could remember that in her childhood she had lived in a great place full of trees and with beautiful gardens.

Japhet, filled with his longing for a father, felt drawn all the more toward the little girl, and at once invested her, too, with romance, until he became as firmly convinced that she came of a great family as he was of his own descent.

Japhet's adventures in search of a father now began in reality. He became a juggler with Melchoir, while Timothy learned tumbling and took turns with the fool as funmaker for the rustic crowds. It was a queer way to look for a long-lost parent, but the monomania that possessed Japhet made him argue with himself that only by wandering from town to town could he hope to meet success, and he gazed earnestly at all the faces that came before his eyes.

Fortune telling and quack medicine succeeded juggling. Melchior was fertile in ideas, the countryside was hungry for wonders, and the beauty and genius of Nattee helped them whenever they engaged in bigger operations than their ordinary ones. The excitement and constant change made time pass fast, and a year went by almost before they realized it.

Then, one day a mysterious messenger came to Melchior, bringing news which evidently excited both Nattee and himself exceedingly. That evening Melchior told Japhet that he and his wife were forced to leave the tribe. He made a fair division of the spoils of the last campaign. Japhet told Melchior that he wanted to take Fleta away from the tribe and put her into a school. Melchior looked startled. Then, after considering for a long while, he agreed, making the condition, however, that news of her be sent to an address which he gave to Japhet, and assuring him further that he would furnish funds at any time if they were needed.

When they were ready to go Nattee came to Japhet secretly and gave him a long chain of coral and gold beads for Fleta. "Do you let Melchior see it," said she, "and take good care of the little girl, for I would not wish her to come to harm."

Japhet took her to a private school near London, and, this care taken from his mind, all his ideas tended toward London. "What a fool I was," said he to Timothy. "I expect to find my father in the very highest ranks of society, and the paths we took led us into the very lowest! We must go to London and appear as gentlemen."

"Very good," said Timothy. "But we have only upward of three hundred pounds, which, to be sure, is a great deal of money, but still won't last long if we are both set up as gentlemen. Now listen to me, Japhet. You were christened after the Honorable Abraham Newlands and I was named after the workhouse pump. You were a gentleman foundling, presenting yourself with a fifty-pound note and good clothes. I made my appearance in rags. Now, it will be much cheaper and much wiser for you to set up as the gentleman while I set up as the valet."

Japhet cried out against the plan, but Timothy was stubborn for once in their relations and carried his point triumphantly, so that a few days afterward a most elegant gentleman of fashion, accompanied by a respectful servant in irreproachable livery, alighted at the Piazza hotel in Covent Garden, London, and ordered the best apartments in the place to be prepared for him.

Japhet had hardly been in the hotel an hour before a note was delivered to him. He opened it to find that it was from the famous Lord Windermear and that it was intended for some one else. But he found in the envelope a letter to a Mr. Masterson, instructing him to deliver a sealed packet to the bearer, and the note itself referred to a secret.

So set was his mind on his search for a father that he succumbed to the temptation to learn a secret that might give him power over a great family and so help him to enter fashionable society.

He found that Mr. Masterton was a lawyer who was generally credited with possessing the secrets of many great families. The lawyer received the letter without question, and from his words Japhet perceived that he was supposed to be a nephew of Lord Windermear, who had been abroad since infancy.

He turned over the papers and Japhet took them to his hotel to read. They disclosed a secret involving the honor and reputation of a most distinguished family. The question was whether the man whom Japhet had personated would relinquish certain claims so that there would be no need to drag the scandal from oblivion.

Soon after he had made himself master of the secret Lord Windermear called on him. He was not surprised to find his supposed nephew bearing the name of Japhet Newlands, for Mr. Masterton had advised that when the young man arrived from abroad he should bear a fictitious name till everything was settled.

"What a handsome fellow you have become!" cried Lord Windermear. "I shall be proud of my nephew."

Then, lowering his voice, he asked anxiously: "Have you read the papers? What is your opinion?"

When Japhet answered that he agreed that everything should be kept secret, the old nobleman shook his hand again and cried that he was proud to see him possessed of such good feeling.

"I will establish a credit for you at my bankers' for a thousand pounds in your name of Newlands," said he, "and I will give you a letter to my friend and kinsman, Major Carbonnell, asking him to make London agreeable to you. I shall tell him that you are my particular friend."

When Lord Windermear had gone Japhet said to Timothy: "Of course, we cannot touch the thousand pounds. That would be swindling. Besides, in a few days at the most the real nephew will be sure to turn up, and we will be found out. But Lord Windermear will not dare then to withdraw his protection from me, for I know his secret. I shall remain in society and shall find my father."

Major Carbonnell had long since squandered all his money. He owned nothing except some jewelry and the house in which he lived. But he had a distant hope of a peerage and he was the undoubted arbiter of fashion. He made it a point to tell everybody that he would not pay his bills or his gambling debts. His frankness mollified his victims, and his very considerate skill at whist permitted him to keep himself in ready cash, for he took great care for his part not to play with those who would not or could not pay their gaming debts.

Major Carbonnell's introduction was sufficient to open the doors of the best society to Japhet. Within three weeks he was as gallant a buck as any of them, and the foundling who had begun life as an apothecary and continued it as a juggler was soon bending over the hands of duchesses in London drawing rooms and, it must be confessed, playing his part as a gentleman of fortune fully as well as he had played his part on village stages before rustic gapers.

Lord Windermear discovered the imposture soon, as Japhet had expected. He relented, however, when Japhet told him his story, assured him that he did not dream of making any use of the secret, and showed him that he had not touched the thousand pounds. As the recital proceeded Windermear perceived that the young man was the victim of a fixed idea. He begged him to dismiss it from his mind and offered to help him.

He insisted also that Japhet use the thousand pounds at the bankers'. Japhet refused, but Lord Windermear was determined. Timothy was delighted, for the few hundred pounds of their joint capital had dwindled sadly under the attacks of Major Carbonnell.

Japhet did not tell the Major that he was rich, nor did he deceive him otherwise by any direct statement. He simply permitted the gentleman to believe what he would. Carbonnell jumped at conclusions, believed them implicitly after he had jumped, and spread the glad news of a new person of fortune among the fortune-hunting ladies and gentlemen of society.

Carbonnell had long lost his principles, but had managed to keep his character above water. He did not hesitate to pluck Japhet at first. But before long he liked him too much to rob him—which fact presupposes a really extraordinary degree of fondness. After that, instead of rooking him, he made Japhet an inactive though not quite innocent accomplice in many of his genteel operations, by which means they kept themselves very comfortably in funds.

The Major soon discovered that Japhet had a mania, though he could not guess what it was. A hundred times Japhet was on the point of exposing himself, for whenever he heard of a scandal in any family or saw a man or woman who resembled him in the most distant way he forgot the part he was playing and everything else and asked questions that aroused surprise and sometimes consternation.

He raced so furiously after a carriage that contained a gentleman whose nose was like his own that he knocked people down right and left and was finally taken up as a pickpocket and only released when Carbonnell went to court with some friends to swear to his identity.

He confronted the great Bishop of E—— and introduced himself as his long-lost son, again on the evidence of a similarity of noses.

His worst scrape was with Lady Maelstrom. Hearing a vague report of an early entanglement, he asked her about it without any circumlocution, with the result that her ladyship became so violently hysterical as to alarm him.

He seized a flower vase, pulled out the flowers and threw the water into Lady Maelstrom's face to revive her. Unfortunately the flowers had been in it for some time and the water was a high green. It did not revive her ladyship, but it certainly vivified her.

Flustered by his accident, he snatched a small bottle, which he thought contained eau de cologne and poured a little into her mouth. The remedy would, no doubt, have been highly successful had it been eau de cologne; but it was not. It was marking ink.

Had society not been so firmly convinced that Mr. Japhet Newlands was a person of immense fortune, his exploits would have ended his fashionable career summarily, but as it was, his eccentricities only made him more interesting.

He was as lucky in money as he was in society. The cards fell his way, and the Major actually refrained from borrowing money from him and even found ways to save him expense.

One night Carbonnell won £2,500 at the gaming table. The next day he fought a duel in which Japhet acted as second. He was unfortunate and fell fatally wounded.

When his will was opened, it was found that the cold-blooded man of the world had left everything he owned to Japhet. With the winnings from play and the house Japhet found himself worth almost £8,000.

"What a lucky dog you are!" said Mr. Masterson, who had forgiven him long before for his deception. "Here you are a protege of Lord Windermear, who should hate you, and instead has taken a vast fancy to you. Here am I who ought to kick you out of doors, sir, inviting you to dinner and, what is more, liking to do it. And now you are in possession of a modest competency. Japhet, you would better give up this wild quest of yours for a father and let Windermear and myself put you into the army or some profession. But you ought to start fair. At present you are sailing under false colors."

Japhet agreed and proved it by telling the truth to his particular friend Harcourt, with the explanation that he wanted everybody to know it. Then he set his teeth to meet the action of fashionable society.

Before the news had time to spread, Timothy informed him that their house had been watched for some time by a gypsy. They both concluded that the tribe wanted to steal Fleta again, and Timothy suggested that he disguise himself and, depending on the knowledge of gypsy manners and speech that he had attained in Melchior's band, gain the confidence of the spy and learn his business.

Accordingly he slipped out one night, disguised so perfectly that even Japhet did not recognize him. Within a few days he sent a message to say that their suspicions were correct. Then

A [illegible]TRAINED [illegible]

From Harper's Monthly.

Back in the ridges of Tennessee two mountaineers got into an argument. Words led to blows, and in the fight that followed one of the men was killed. A neighbor rode on ahead to the dead man's cabin to prepare his wife. He found her seated at a table eating apple dumplings. He broke the sad news to her as gently as he could. She listened quietly, with a dumpling poised in the air half way to her mouth. When the neighbor paused she stuffed the dumpling into her mouth and said: "You jest wait 'til I finish this hyer dumplin' an' then you all 'll hear bollerin'."

nothing came from him for a while.

While Japhet was waiting for Timothy's return, he found another clue to his father, as he thought. Without waiting for reflection, he packed a few clothes and hurried to Ireland, whither the trail led.

As usual, he discovered nothing; but his wild goose chase turned into a great adventure after all. In a stage coach in Ireland he saw opposite to him a sleeping passenger who held a packet of papers in his hand. On this packet was written the name of the London agent whose address Melchoir had given to him. While Japhet was staring at it, the man dropped the packet and Japhet saw that it was addressed to Sir Henry de Clare, Mount Castle, Monnemara.

Japhet, filled with his mania for discovering parents, promptly interrogated the stranger, who answered surlily, evidently suspecting him. He did, however, manage to learn that Sir Henry had succeeded his brother, Sir William, some time ago. Sir William had left a wife, but no children, their only child, a daughter, having been drowned in a mountain torrent years before.

Japhet noticed that his informant, who proved to be Sir Henry's agent, stepped out at the next stage to look at the way bill, evidently to learn his name. The man's secretiveness confirmed Japhet in his consuming passion. He determined to go to Mount Castle, though he couldn't explain to himself what on earth he could expect to find out.

At the point where stages were to be changed for Connemara, the agent hired a chaise and departed some hours ahead of Japhet, who had to content himself with a poor vehicle at last.

As he went on, the journey presented more and more difficulties. Unaccountable delays held him back at every posting place. The conveyances became poorer and poorer. Several times there were none ready at all, so that he had to lie over. At last, when he came within a few hours' ride of Mount Castle, he could hire neither horse, vehicle or guide. Undaunted by the gruff behavior of the people and the evident dislike that they showed him, he determined to walk to the castle.

At a brook which crossed the road just before the entrance to the castle, he stopped for a moment, bewildered by the darkness of the night. There came the sound of quick footsteps behind him, and as he turned, a savage blow on his head knocked him senseless.

When he recovered he found himself locked in some underground place, apparently a cellar. His head ached desperately from the blow. He had just assured himself that no serious harm had been done when the door was unlocked and a man entered. It took Japhet some time to accustom his eyes to the dim night; then he recognized his visitor. It was Melchior.

Ignoring Japhet's angry words, Melchoir said: "Japhet, Sir Henry wants Fleta to be delivered to him. Give us her address and write an order to the school where she is, so we can send for her, and you shall be released."

"I absolutely refuse," said Japhet. "You want to harm her. What is your connection with Sir Henry?"

"That I cannot tell you," said Melchior. "I am in his power and he is a desperate man, who exercises autocratic rule in this part of the country. You are lost if you do not accede. I shall leave you to think it over."

For three days Japhet was left in his dark cell, being visited every day by Melchior and refusing anew each day to tell where Fleta was. On the fourth day Japhet, infuriated, said to Melchior: "You are Sir Henry de Clare! And I am convinced that you wish to put Fleta out of the way because she has some claim on the estate left by your brother!"

Melchior's face became that of a demon. He opened his lips to reply, but turned away without a word and left the cell. For two days Japhet lay in the dark without food or drink. At last he heard footsteps. The door was opened and closed. Two men stood in the chamber, each armed with a great sledge hammer.

"It's all over with me!" cried Japhet, "and I shall never find out who is my father. Come on, murderers, and do your work quickly!"

The two men advanced without speaking a word. The foremost set down his lantern and swiftly swung his hammer with both hands. At that instant the man behind him raised his weapon and struck the foremost man dead with a single blow.

"Silence," whispered a voice that Japhet well knew. It was the voice of Timothy. "Horses are near by, for we stipulated to leave the country the moment it was done. Hurry."

Japhet lost no time. Little was said while they tore through the night, till they had reached a port town and had entered the inn. Then Timothy explained his providential arrival on the scene.

He had gained the gypsy's entire confidence and had led him on a false trail to a boarding school where he had pretended that Fleta was installed. They prepared to enter the house and kidnap her. This naturally required some time. About the time their arrangements were completed a message arrived from Melchior bidding him postpone his attempt for the present and hasten to Mount Castle, where important work was to be done.

Timothy went with him and luckily managed to deceive Melchior, who offered them £200 for putting somebody out of the way. Timothy had learned that Japhet was in Ireland. He immediately suspected who the intended victim was and entered eagerly into the proposed murder. The rest was simple.

Japhet now felt sure that Melchior was, indeed, no other than Sir Henry de Clare, and that Fleta was an heiress to the estates. The latter idea became a conviction with him when he reached Dublin and discovered from Sir William's will filed there that only a small portion of the estate was entailed, while the rest went not only to male heirs but also to females.

He dispatched a letter to Sir Henry telling him that he would prosecute him for attempting his murder. Two days afterward the papers announced that Sir Henry de Clare had committed suicide. Following this came a letter from Lady de Clare to Japhet. It said:

"Fleta is the daughter of Sir William de Clare. The girl found drowned was merely dressed in her clothes. Dearly has my husband paid for his act of folly and wickedness, to which I was never a party."

The letter was signed "Nattee" and Japhet learned that she had left the castle after the funeral and had been seen later traveling south with a band of gypsies.

Lord Windermear and Mr. Masterson sought out Sir William's widow, who was living in London, and Japhet restored her daughter to her. She recognized the gold and coral necklace at once as being the one that little Cecilia had worn when she disappeared. There had been wonder at the time when the unrecognizable body was found because the necklace was not on it.

Japhet, having thus made his beloved little Fleta happy and found a mother for her, thought to return to fashionable society and pursue his own search for a father. But the news of his true position and, worse than all, of his lack of wealth, had spread while he was in Ireland. He was cut in the street and in the clubs, those who had borrowed from him failed to see him, and those who had fawned on him sneered at him.

For a time he tried to brave it out. Then he became discouraged and resolved to gain wealth by one desperate effort. He sought the gambling hells. In three nights he had lost all he owned, even the house that had been bequeathed to him.

Poor Japhet now saw himself just where he had started—penniless and an outcast. Too proud to appeal to the only friends he had left, Lord Windermear or Mr. Masterton, he resolved to turn his back on society. Leaving a note for Timothy, in which he begged him to forgive him for running away and asked him to sell what was left and keep the money, he departed from London on foot, exchanged his fine clothes at the first village for a smock frock and corduroy trousers, and with nothing but twenty pounds in his pocket, set forth on his second pilgrimage, with no very clear idea in his mind except that he despised the world.

His scorn was increased as he wandered, for he was robbed right and left, till even the bundle in which he carried his scanty spare clothing was stolen. Bitterly he reflected that so long as he remained an impostor he had been treated by the world to its best, admired, flattered and beloved; while now that he was honest, he was met with contempt, cruelty and treachery wherever he turned.

The cup of his sorrows was not full. As he wandered aimlessly along a country road after his bundle had been stolen he was seized by constables and charged with having attempted a highway robbery.

Circumstantial evidence was strong against him. The case was aggravated by his determination not to give him name. After a short trial he was sentenced summarily to death.

A few days afterward the real criminals were taken and confessed. Japhet was discharged. None noticed that he paid no attention to what was said to him. They ascribed his white face and his wild glance to the ordeal he had undergone; but in reality he had lost his mind.

How long he wandered or where he went he never knew. In after days he could remember only that he ran at times and seized people by the arms, crying: "Are you my father?" and that at other times he tottered along, sobbing like a child. At last all consciousness left him.

When he came back to life he was in bed, his head shaved and his arm bound up after repeated bleedings. Beside him sat a young girl in a Quaker's dress.

He felt as if he could have gazed at her forever. Her clear and transparent complexion was the most beautiful he had ever seen. Her glorious eyes were arched by eyebrows regular as if drawn with compasses. Her nose was very straight, but not large. Her mouth was perfection. Under her prim, chaste Quaker's cap wonderful auburn hair showed curls that could not be restrained.

She told Japhet that he had been found on the road and taken in by a Quaker gentleman, who, she said, recognized him as one he knew. Japhet cried out in astonishment when he learned that his rescuer was Mr. Cophagus.

Thus had his search for a father brought him back as in a preordained circle.

Mr. Cophagus soon bustled in, little changed except for his Quaker garb, and explained that he had married a Quaker lady, the sister of Japhet's beautiful nurse. Under their care he recovered fast. As soon as he was quite restored Mr. Cophagus proposed to him that he stay in Reading (which was the town in which he found himself) and open an apothecary's shop with money which he would loan him.

Japhet assented, and presently the young buck of the London drawing rooms, frequenter of gambling hells and lounger in clubs, stood behind a counter in Quaker garb, dispensing drugs and feeling happier than he had ever felt before.

It was some time before Japhet realized that his happiness was due not to his prosperity in the business of apothecary, but to the daily sight of Susannah Temple.

He tried his best to rid himself of his longing for a return to his fashionable life, and he refrained steadfastly from writing to anyone in London; but the faithful Timothy found him for all that. He traced him after long wanderings of his own, and the two friends were reunited to the joy of both.

Japhet had almost resigned himself to discard all thought of searching for his father again, when one morning an advertisement caught his eye. It called on Japhet Newlands to communicate with Mr. Masterton to learn that of which he has [illegible] in search."

Japhet almost forgot Susannah. In a whirl of excitement he told her what had happened, in a whirl of excitement he hastened from the house and in wilder excitement than ever he arrived in London, where he lost no time in buying fashionable clothes, and then presented himself before Mr. Masterton.

"Japhet," said Mr. Masterton, after he had welcomed the young man with most unlawyer-like delight, "there is no doubt that we have found your father, or rather that he has found you. But he is a most terrible old tiger. I hope you have the bump of filial veneration strong, Japhet, and plenty of filial duty, or you will be kicked out of the house in a week. He is nothing but what I call him, an old Bengal tiger."

And so Japhet found him. He heard an angry growl like that of a wild beast when they approached the apartments where his father was waiting for him. When the door opened, Japhet saw two East Indian servants standing humbly with their arms crossed behind a sofa on which lay a man of great size, with a brownish-yellow complexion and silvery white hair, while equally white whiskers surrounded great features in a way that certainly formed a striking resemblance to a tiger.

Imperiously he dismissed the lawyer and as soon as he was alone with his son, except for the servants, he growled:

"So you are my son. There appears to be no doubt about it. The proofs are convincing. But if you think, young man, to win my favor by your good looks, you are mistaken. You look too much like your mother, whose memory is anything but agreeable."

Japhet's anger rose. In that moment he regretted most sincerely that he had ever found a father, even though that father was the great General de Benyon, brother to an earl, with a fortune made in the East Indies.

Mr. Masterton's disclosures had not aroused much filial love in his breast. His father, while a lieutenant, had married a young woman who had led him to believe that she was an heiress, while he had led her to believe that he was rich, instead of being only a younger brother with a beggarly allowance. When the two discovered the mutual swindle they separated at once and by common consent left the child at the Foundling Hospital in order to hide their marriage. The wife had calmly married again, committing bigamy with her first husband's knowledge. After her death General De Benyon, moved slightly by a sense of shame, but mostly from a desire to have an heir for his property, decided on a belated hunt for his son.

He applied to Mr. Masterton, that gentleman being the lawyer for all of his class, and this of course made the search very simple.

Disgusted with the story, Japhet was in no mood to bear his newly found parent's ill humor. He replied with such spirit that the General howled to his servants to throw him out of the hotel. That he did not do it himself was not due to unwillingness, but the General had hurt his ankle while riding and was bandaged into temporary helplessness.

The servants advanced dutifully to do his bidding, whereupon Japhet knocked them both down and began to belabor them so lustily with the first heavy implement he could snatch that they fled yelling.

They left their master to roar and curse in unavailing rage, for Japhet had promptly locked the door after them. He waited patiently while his honored father stormed himself out. Suddenly the old Bengal tiger ceased swearing at Japhet and transferred his compliments to the bandage which had become tightened during his violent efforts to rise, and now caused him intense anguish.

Japhet proceeded to loosen the wrappings and with his professional skill soon relieved his pain. Then he bowed respectfully and said:

"Now, sir, I will take my leave. Had you received me kindly you would have found a son who would have met that kindness with a fond and affectionate heart, for he has yearned for his father through his whole life. Now I will go, and neither poverty, privation or any affliction will induce me to intrude into your presence again."

He turned to go. The Bengal tiger glared at him, started to swear again, weakened, and held out his hands.

"Stop—don't go—Japhet—my son—forgive me—forgive your father."

The Bengal tiger was conquered. Japhet knelt down and kissed his hand. The General drew him close and the Foundling wept on his father's breast at last.

• • •

Old Bengal tigers are not conquered in a moment. There were many battles between the royal old beast and his young tamer. But gradually the General became tractable. First he learned to be proud of his boy, and, such is the contrariness of man, prouder for his adventures as a make-believe gentleman than he was of him for his honest career in Quaker garb as an apothecary.

From pride his feelings gradually changed to affection, and though it required great diplomacy to make him agree to Japhet's marriage with a Quaker, he consented even to that. The Bengal tiger was thoroughly tame at last.

The quiet, prim little Quaker girl had not viewed Japhet's return to the fashionable world with satisfaction. Her fine eyes looked disapproval on him. When he departed in response to the advertisement, she had said:

"Japhet Newlands, I will rejoice at everything that may tend to thy happiness, believe me, but I do not feel assured but that this trial may prove too great and that thou mayst fall away from the right path, which thou hast so lately entered. Indeed, I perceive that even now thou art excited with new ideas and visions of pride."

Japhet thought of this remark of the little gray dove and smiled one night when Mrs. Susannah came down the grand staircase of the grand house in which they lived with the General, and asked:

"Is not this a pretty dress?"

"Yes, my dear," replied her husband, "but, Susan, do you not think that it is cut a little too low?" "Why, De Benyon, it's not half as low as your great friends, Lady de Clare and her daughter, wear their dresses. Indeed, I think I should know, for if I have no other merit, I have at least the merit of being the best dressed woman in London."

MICE WILL PLAY

By. O. Henry.

Copyright 1906 by Thomas H. McKee.

PROBABLY the highest paid and best-known short story writer in America to-day is the man who chooses to sign his work with the nom-de-plume "O. Henry." His talent in the realm of short fiction has been so superbly developed as to give for him the nickname "The American de Maupassant." He spent many of the early years of his life in the West and Southwest as a newspaper man, drug store clerk and cowpuncher, which accounts in a general way for his amazing versatility and his wholesome humor.

The following story, "Mice Will Play," is the best thing Mr. Henry has written lately and is replete with those qualities which definitely mark his work.

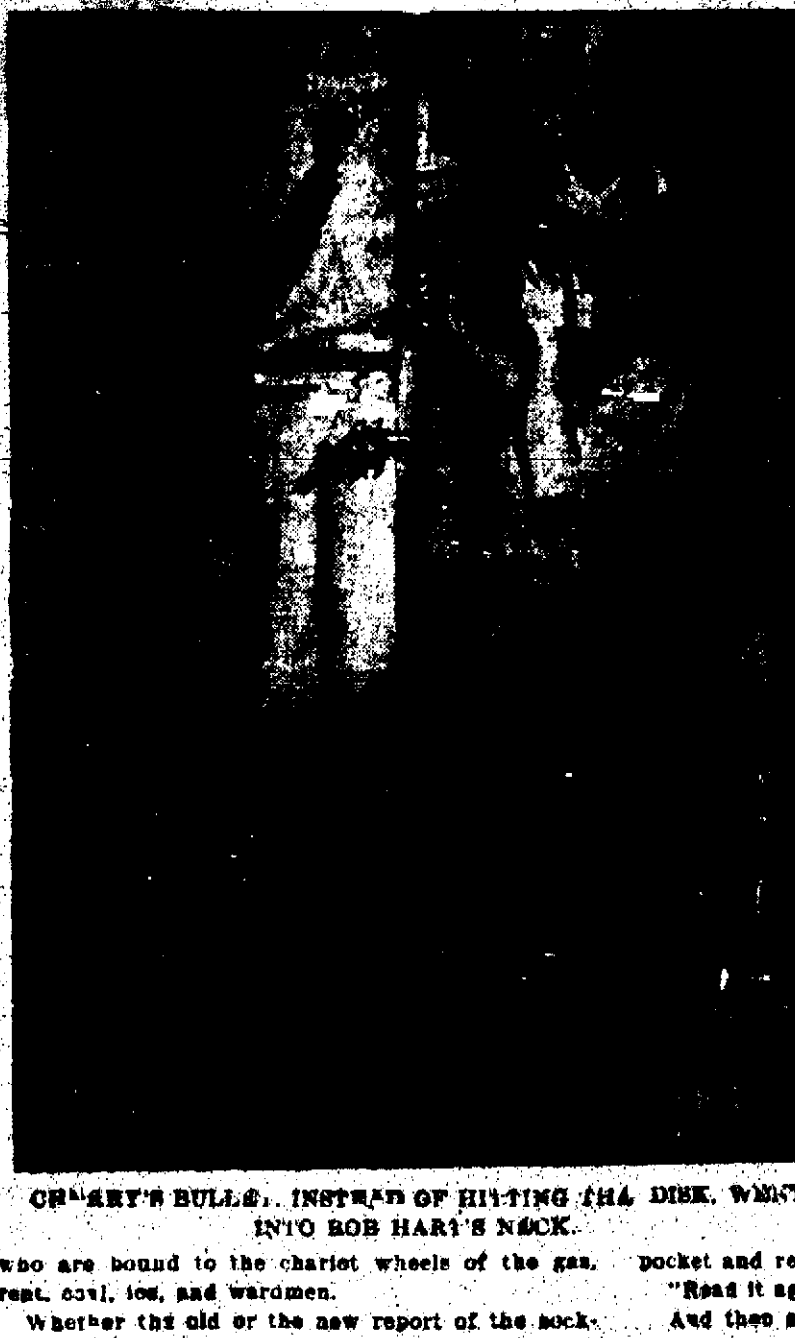

I SUPPOSE you know all about the stage and stage people. You've been touched with and by actors, and you read the newspaper criticisms and the jokes in the weeklies about the Rialto and the chorus girls and the long-haired tragedians. And I suppose a condensed list of your ideas about the mysterious stageland would boil down to something like this:

Leading ladies have five husbands, paste diamonds, and figures no better than your own (madam), if they weren't padded. Chorus girls are inseparable from peroxide, Panhards and Pittsburg. All shows walk back to New York on tan oxford and railroad ties. Irreproachable actresses reserve the comic-landlady part for their mothers on Broadway and their step-aunts on the road. Kyrle Bellew's real name is Boyle O'Kelley. The ravings of John McCullough in the phonograph were stolen from the first sale of the Ellen Terry memoirs. Joe Weber is funnier than E. H. Sothern; but Henry Miller is getting older than he was.

All theatrical people on leaving the theatre at night drink champagne and eat lobsters until noon the next day. After all, the moving pictures have got the whole bunch pounded to a pulp.

Now, few of us know the real life of the stage people. If we did, the profession might be more overcrowded than it is. We look askance at the players with an eye full of patronizing superiority—and we go home and practice all sorts of elocution and gestures in front of our looking-glasses.

Latterly there has been much talk of the actor people in a new light. It seems to have been discovered that instead of being motoring bacchanalians and diamond-hungry loreleis they are business-like folk, students and ascetics with children, homes and libraries, owning real estate and conducting their private affairs in as orderly and business-like a manner as any of us good citizens

Whether the old or the new report of the sock-and-buskiners be the true one is a surmise that has no place here. I offer you merely this little story of two strollers; and for proof of its truth can show you only the dark patch above the cast-iron handle of the stage entrance door Keetor's old vaudeville theatre made there by the petulant push of gloved hands too impatient to finger the clumsy thumb latch—and where I last saw Cherry whisking through like a swallow in her nest, on time to the minute, as usual, to dress for her act.

The vaudeville team of Hart & Cherry was an inspiration. Bob Hart had been roaming through the Eastern and Western circuits for four years with a mixed-up act comprising a monologue, three lightning changes with songs, a couple of imitations of celebrated imitators, and a buck and wing dance that had drawn a glance of approval from the bass-viol player in more than one house than which no performer ever received more satisfactory evidence of good work.

The greatest treat an actor can have is to witness the pitiful performance with which all other actors desecrate the stage. In order to give himself this pleasure he will often forsake the sunniest Broadway corner between Thirty-fourth and Forty-fourth to attend a matinee offering by his less gifted brothers. Once during the lifetime of a minstrel joke one comes to scoff and remains to go through with that most difficult exercise of Thespian muscles—the audible contact of the palm of one hand against the palm of the other.

A, B, C, and D glowed successively on the announcement spaces and passed into oblivion, each plunging Mr. Hart deeper into the gloom. Others of the audience shrieked, squirmed, whistled and applauded; but Bob Hart, "All the Mustard and a Whole Show in Himself," sat with his face as long and his hands as far apart as a boy hiding a bany and his hands as far apart as a boy holding a hank of yarn for his grandmother to wind into a ball.

But when H came on, "The Mustard" suddenly sat up straight. He was the happy alphabetical prognosticator of Winona Cherry, in character songs and impersonations.

There was scarcely more than two bites to Cherry; but she delivered the merchandise tied with a pink cord and charged to the old man's account. She first showed you a deliciously dewey and ginghamy country girl with a basket of property daisies who informed you ingeniously that there were other things to be learned at the old log schoolhouse besides cipherin' and nouns, especially "When the Teach-er Kept Me In." Vanishing with a quick flirt of gingham apron strings, she reappeared in considerable less than a "trice" as a fluffy "Parisienne"—so near does art bring the old red mill to the Moulin Rouge. And then

But you know the rest. And so did Bob Hart; but he saw something else. He thought he saw that Cherry was the only professional on the short order stage that he had seen who seemed exactly to fit the part of "Helen Grimes" in the sketch he had written and kept tucked away in the tray of his trunk. Of course Bob Hart, as well as every other normal actor, grocer, newspaper man, professor, curb broker and farmer, has a play tucked away somewhere. They tuck 'em in trays of trunks, trunks of trees, desks, haymows, pigeon-holes, inside pockets, safe deposit vaults, handboxes, and coal cellars, waiting for Mr. Frohman to call. They belong among the fifty-seven different kinds.

But Bob Hart's sketch was not designed to end in a pickle jar. He called it "Mice Will Play." He had kept it quiet and hidden away ever since he wrote it, waiting to find a partner who fitted his conception of "Helen Grimes." And here was "Helen" herself, with all the innocent abandon, the youth, the sprightliness, and the flawless stage art that his critical taste demanded.

After the act was over Hart found the manager in the box office and got Cherry's address. At five the next afternoon he called at the musty old house in the West Forties and sent up his professional card.

By daylight, in a secular shirtwaist and plain voile skirt, with her hair curbed and her Sister of Charity Eyes, Winona Cherry might have been playing the part of Prudence Wise, the deacon's daughter, in the great (unwritten) New England drama not yet entitled anything.

"I know your act, Mr. Hart," she said, after she had looked over his card carefully. "What do you wish to see me about?"

"I saw you work last night," said Hart. "I've written a sketch that I've been saving up. It's for two; and I think you can do the other part. I thought I'd see you about it."

"Come in the parlor," said Miss Cherry. "I've been wishing for something of the sort. I think I'd like to act instead of doing turns."

Bob Hart drew his cherished "Mice Will Play" from his pocket and read it to her.

"Read it again, please," said Miss Cherry.

And then she pointed out to him clearly how it could be improved by introducing a messenger instead of a telephone call, and cutting the dialogue just before the climax while they were struggling for the pistol, and by completely changing the lines and business of Helen Grimes at the point where her jealousy overcame her. Hart yielded to all her strictures without argument. She had at once put her finger on the sketch's weaker points. That was her woman's intuition that he had lacked. At the end of their talk Hart was willing to stake the judgment, experience and savings of his four years of vaudeville that "Mice Will Play" would blossom into a perennial flower in the garden of the circuits. Miss Cherry was slower to decide. After many puckerings of her smooth young brow and tappings on her small, white teeth with the end of a lead pencil she gave out her dictum.

"Mr. Hart," said she, "I believe your sketch is going to win out. That Grimes part fits me like a shrinkable flannel after its first trip to a handless hand laundry. I can make it stand out like the colonel of the Forty-fourth Regiment at a Little Mothers' Bazaar. And I've seen you work. I know what you can do with the other part. But business is business. How much do you get a week for the stunt you do now?"

"Two hundred," answered Hart.

"I get one hundred for mine," said Cherry. "That's about the natural discount for a woman. But I live on it and put a few simoleons every week under the loose brick in the old kitchen hearth. The stage is all right. I love it; but there's something else I love better—that's a little country home some day with Plymouth Rock chickens and six ducks wandering about the yard.

"If you want to make this a business partnership, Mr. Hart, with all nonsense cut out of it, I'm in on it. I know something about vaudeville teams in general; but this would have to be one in particular. I want you to know that I'm on the stage for what I can cart away from it every pay day in a little manila envelope with nicotine stains on it, where the cashier has licked the flap. It's kind of a hobby of mine to want to cravenette myself for plenty of rainy days in the future. I want you to know just how I am. I don't know what an all-night restaurant looks like; I drink only weak tea; I never spoke to a man at a stage entrance in my life, and I've got money in five savings banks."

"Miss Cherry," said Bob Hart in his smooth, serious tones, "you're in on your own terms. I've got 'strictly business' pasted in my hat and stenciled on my make-up box. When I dream of nights I always see a five-room bungalow on the north shore of Long Island, with a Jap cooking clam broth and duckling in the kitchen, and me with the title deeds to the place in my pongee coat pocket, swinging in a hammock on the porch, reading Stanley's 'Exploration into Africa.' And nobody else around. You never was interested in Africa, was you, Miss Cherry?"

"Not any," said Cherry. "What I'm going to do with my money is to bank it. You can get four per cent. on deposits. Even at the salary I've been earning, I've figured out that in ten years I've have an income of about $50 a month just from the interest alone. Well, I might invest some of the principal in a little business—say, trimming hats or a beauty parlor, and make more."

"Well," said Hart, "you've got the proper idea all right, all right, anyhow. There are mighty few actors who amount to anything at all who couldn't fix themselves for the wet days to come if they'd save their money instead of blowing it. I'm glad you've got the correct business idea of it, Miss Cherry. I think the same way; and I think this sketch will more than double what both of us earn now when we get it shaped up."

They rehearsed it by the old-fashioned boarding-house clock in the rarely used parlor until its warning click at five minutes to the hour would occur every time exactly half a second before the click of the unloaded revolver that Helen Grimes used in rehearsing the thrilling climax of the sketch.

Yes, that was a thriller, and a piece of excellent work. In the act a real 32-calibre revolver was used loaded with a real cartridge. Helen Grimes, who is a Western girl of decidedly Buffalo Billish skill and daring, is tempestuously in love with Frank Desmond, the private secretary and confidential prospective son-in-law of her father, "Arapahoe" Grimes, quarter-million dollar cattle king, owning a ranch that, judging from the scenery, is in either the Bad Lands or Amagansett, L. I. Desmond (in private life Mr. Bob Hart) wears puttees and Meadow Brook Hunt riding trousers; and gives his address as New York, leaving you to wonder why he comes to the Bad Lands or Amagansett (as the case may be) and at the same time to mildly conjecture why a cattleman should want puttees about his ranch with a secretary in 'em.

Well, anyhow, you know as well as I do, that we all like that kind of play whether we admit it or not—something along in between "Bluebeard, Jr.," and "Cymbeline" played in the Russian.

There were only two parts and a half in "Mice Will Play." Hart and Cherry were the two, of course; and the half was a minor part, always played by a stage hand, who merely came in once in a Tuxedo coat and a panic to announce that the house was surrounded by Indians, and to turn down the gas fire in the grate by the manager's orders.

There was another girl in the sketch—a Fifth Avenue society swelless who was visiting the ranch and who had sirened Jack Valentine when he was a wealthy clubman on lower Third Avenue before he lost his money. The girl appeared on the stage only in the photographic state—Jack had her Barony stuck up on the mantle of the Aragon of the Bad Lands droring-room. Helen was jealous, of course.

And now for the thriller. Old "Arapahoe" Grimes dies of anginia pectoris one night—so Helen informs us in a stage fairyboat whisper over the footlights—while only his secretary was present. And that same day he was known to have had $647,000 in cash in his (ranch) library just received for the sale of a drove of beeves in the East (that accounts for the prices we pay for steak!). The cash disappears at the same time. Jack Valentine was the only person with the ranchman when he made his alleged croak.

"Gawd knows I love him; but if he has done this deed——" you sabe, don't you? And then there are some mean things said about the Fifth Avenue Girl—who doesn't come on the stage—and can we blame her, with the vaudeville trust holding down prices until one actually must be buttoned in the back by a call boy, maids cost so much?

But, wait. Here's the climax. Helen Grimes, chaparralish as she can be, is goaded beyond imprudence. She convinces herself that Jack Valentine is not only a falsetto, but a financier. To lose at one full sweep $647,000 and a lover in riding trousers with angles in the sides like the variations on the chart of a typhoid fever patient is enough to make any perfect lady mad. So, then!

They stand in the (ranch) library which is furnished with mounted elk heads (didn't the elks have a fish fry in Amagansett once?), and the denouement begins. I know of no more interesting time in the run of a play unless it be when the prologue ends.

Goaded beyond imprudence (as before said), Helen says to Jack Valentine: "Robber and thief—and worse yet, stealer of trusting hearts, this should be your fate!"

With that out she whips, of course, the trusty 32-caliber.

"But I will be merciful," goes on Helen. "You shall live—that be you punishment. I will show you how easily I could have sent you to the death that you deserve. There is her picture on the mantel. I will send through her more beautiful face the bullet that should have pierced your craven heart."

And she does it. And there's no fake blank cartridges or assistants pulling strings. Helen fires. The bullet—the actual bullet—goes through the face of the photograph and then strikes the hidden spring of the sliding panel on the wall and lo! the panel slides, and there is the missing $647,000 in convincing stacks of currency and bags of gold. It's great. You know how it is. Cherry practiced for two months at a target on the roof of her boarding house. It took good shooting. In the sketch she had to hit a brass disk only three inches in diameter, covered by wall paper in the panel; and she had to stand in exactly the same spot every night, and the photo had to be in exactly the same spot, and she had to shoot steady and true every time.

After the show the booking agents signed blank checks and pressed fountain pens upon Hart and Cherry. Five hundred dollars a week was what it panned out.

That night at 11:30 Bob Hart took off his hat and bade Cherry good night at her boarding-house door.

"Mr. Hart," said she thoughtfully, "come inside just a few minutes. We've got our chance now to make good and to make money. What we want to do is to cut expenses every cent we can, and save all we can."

"Right," said Bob. "It's business with me. You've got your scheme for banking yours; and I dream every night of that bungalow with the Jap cook and nobody around to raise trouble. Anything to enlarge the net receipts will engage my attention."

"Come inside just a few minutes," repeated Cherry, deeply thoughtful. "I've got a proposition to make to you that will reduce our expenses a lot and help you work out your own future and help me work out mine—and all on business principles."

"Mice Will Play" had a tremendously successful run in New York for ten weeks—rather neat for a vaudeville sketch—and then it started on the circuits. Without following it, it may be said that it was a solid drawing card for two years without a sign of abated popularity.

"As square and high-toned a little team as ever came over the circuit. It's a pleasure to read their names on the booking list. Quiet, hard workers, no Johnny and Mabel nonsense, on the job to the minute, straight home after the act, and each of 'em as gentlemanlike as a lady. I don't expect to handle any attractions that give me less trouble or more respect for their profession."

And now, after so much cracking of a nutshell, here is the kernel of the story.

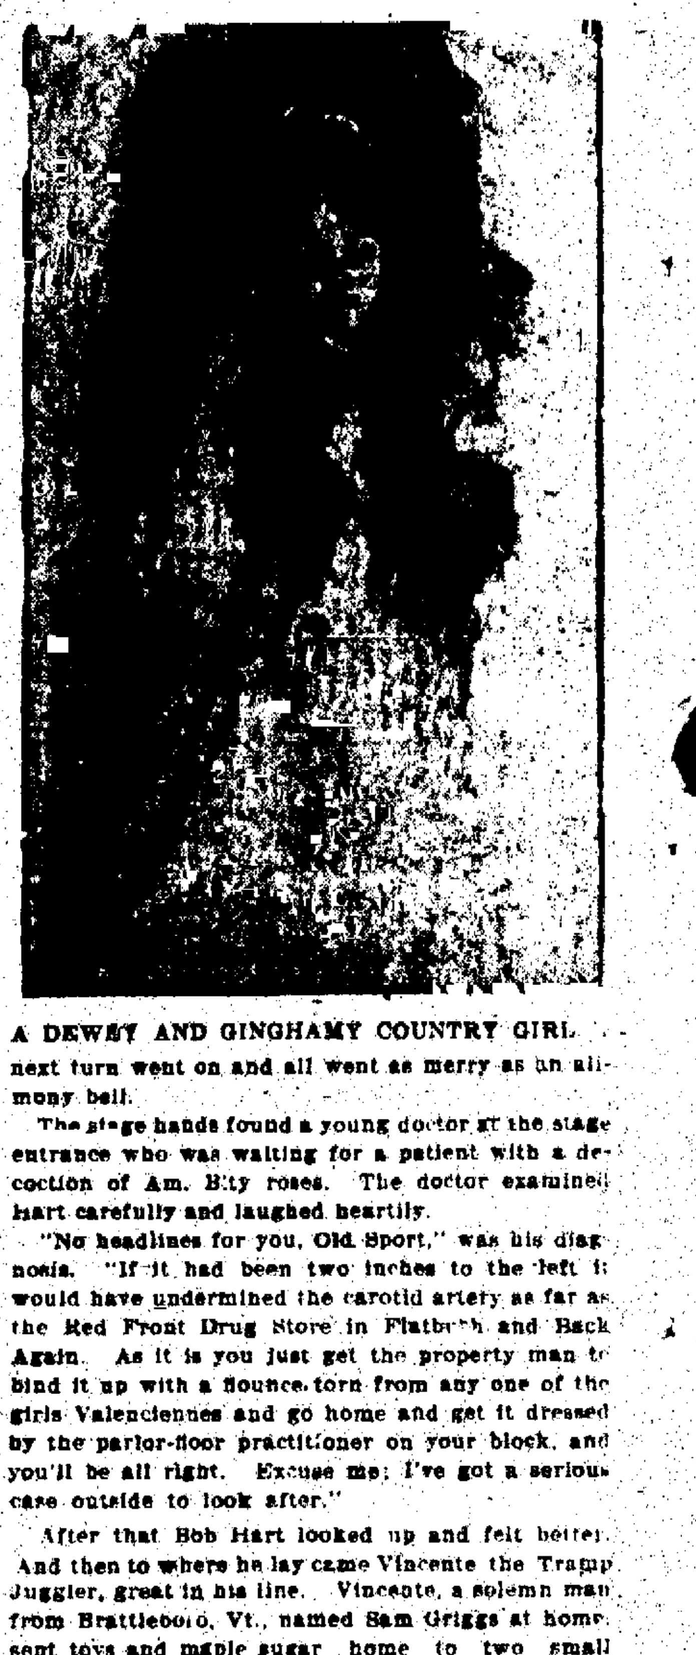

At the end of its second season "Mice Will Play" came back to New York for another run at the roof gardens and summer theaters. There was never any trouble in booking it at the top-notch price. Bob Hart had his bungalow nearly paid for and Cherry had so many savings-deposit bank books that she had begun to buy sectional bookcases on the installment plan to hold them.

I tell you these things to assure you, even if you can't believe it, that many, very many of the stage people are workers with abiding ambitions—just the same as the man who wants to be president, or the grocery clerk who wants a home in Flatbush, or a lady who wants to flop out of the Count-pan into the Prince-fire. And I hope I may be allowed to say, without chipping into the contribution basket, that they often move in a mysterious way, their wonders to perform.

But, listen.

At the first performance of "Mice Will Play" in New York at the new Westphalia (no hams alluded to) Theater, Winona Cherry was nervous. When she fired at the photograph of the Eastern beauty on the mantel, the bullet, instead of penetrating the photo and then striking the disk, went into the lower left side of Bob Hart's neck. Not expecting to get it there, Hart collapsed neatly, while Cherry fainted in a most artistic manner.

The audience surmised that they viewed a comedy instead of a tragedy in which the principals were married or reconciled, applauded with great enjoyment. The Cool Head who always graces such occasions, rang the curtain down, and two platoons of scene shifters respectively and more or less respectfully removed Hart & Cherry from the stage. The next turn went on and all went as merry as an alimony bell.

The stage hands found a young doctor at the stage entrance who was waiting for a patient with a decoction of Am. Beauty roses. The doctor examined Hart carefully and laughed heartily.

"No headlines for you, Old Sport," was his diagnosis. "If it had been two inches to the left it would have undermined the carotid artery as far as the Red Front Drug Store in Flatbush and Back Again. As it is you just get the property man to bind it up with a flounce torn from any one of the girls' Valenciennes and go home and get it dressed by the parlor-floor practitioner on your block, and you'll be all right. Excuse me; I've got a serious case outside to look after."

After that Bob Hart looked up and felt better. And then to where he lay came Vincente the Tramp Juggler, great in his line. Vincente, a solemn man from Brattleboro, Vt., named Sam Griggs at home, sent toys and maple sugar home to two small daughters from every town he played. Vincente had moved on the same circuits with Hart & Cherry, and was their peripatetic friend.

"Bob," said Vincente in his serious way, "I'm glad it's no worse. The little lady is wild about you."

"Who?" asked Hart.

"Cherry," said the juggler. "We didn't know how bad you were hurt; and we kept her away. It's taking the manager and three girls to hold her."

"It was an accident, of course," said Hart. "Cherry's all right. She wasn't feeling in good trim or she couldn't have done it. There's no hard feelings. She's strictly business. The doctor says I'll be on the job again in three days. Don't let her worry."

"Man," said Sam Griggs severely, puckering his old, smooth, lined face, 'are you a chest automaton or a human pincushion? Cherry's crying her heart out for you—calling 'Bob, Bob,' every second, with them holding her hands and keeping her from coming to you."

"What's the matter with her?" asked Hart with wide-open eyes. "The sketch will go on again in three days. I'm not hurt bad, the doctor says. She won't lose out half a week's salary. I know it was an accident. What's the matter with her?"

"You seem to be blind, or a sort of a fool," said Vincente. "The girl loves you and is almost mad about your hurt. What's the matter with you? Is she nothing to you? I wish you could hear her call you."

"Loves me?" asked Bob Hart, rising from the stack of scenery on which he lay. "Cherry loves me?" Why, it is impossible."

"I wish you could see her and hear her," said Griggs.

"But, man," said Bob Hart, sitting up, "it's impossible. It's impossible, I tell you. I never dream of such a thing."

"No human being," said the Tramp Juggler, "could mistake it. She's wild for love of you. How have you been so blind?"

"But, my God," said Bob Hart, rising to his feet, "it's too late. It's too late, I tell you, Sam; it's too late. It can't be. You must be wrong. It's impossible. There's some mistake."

"She's crying for you," said the Tramp Juggler. "For love of you she's fighting three, and calling your name so loud they don't dare to raise the curtain. Wake up, man."

"For love of me?" said Bob Hart with staring eyes. "Don't I tell you it's too late? It's too late, man. Why, Cherry and I have been married two years!"

IN DOOR GAMES AND THOSE WHO PLAY THEM

CHECKERS—"YOUR MOVE NEXT!"

QUEEN ALEXANDRA AND HER SISTER PLAYING BILLIARDS

MARK TWAIN AND HIS DAUGHTER PLAYING CARDS

TOLSTOI PLAYING CHESS WITH HIS SON-IN-LAW

WHEN Dr. Benjamin Franklin discovered the fact that "time is money" and saddled it on the American people he could scarcely have foreseen what a hard rider it would become, lashing and spurring its career ever since. Fortunately there is another adage which is beginning to exert a perceptible influence and to counteract in a measure the too vigorous lesson conveyed by the Philadelphia sage's admonition. Men are beginning to realize that "all work and no play makes Jack a dull boy" and to govern themselves accordingly.

Although it would have been rank heresy in the early days of the American republic to advocate the theory that games and pastimes are justified to the moral sense by their sanitary value, such a statement shocks no one nowadays. Cards, chessmen, dominos and the billiard table are as manifestly means of health as are hair mattresses and ventilating flues. Even the contemned dice box, as used in backgammon and similar games, is often more valuable to an invalid than the pill box.

An Intellectual Tonic.

Probably Spenser, who always became markedly sarcastic when dice, cards and billiards were mentioned, could not have included chess in his list of "unmanly sports," for of all indoor games which are played by men and women it is the one which requires a degree of mental skill not demanded by any other mere pastime ever devised. It is a game so ancient that its origin is hidden in the mists of legendary times. That it was popular in Egypt so long ago as the days of Mrs. Potiphar is made certain by the recent discovery of an inlaid chessboard in the sarcophagus of Queen Hatasu, a lady who ruled the land of the pharaohs almost 4,000 years ago.

It is played today in about every country which has acquired a degree of civilization, occidental or oriental. Hosts of historical worthies have been devoted to it, among them Frederick the Great, Napoleon, Voltaire, Von Moltke, Lessing, Lord Lytton and Tennyson. Even Ben Franklin, with all his notions of the value of time, did not regard chess playing as a waste of that precious commodity. He was actually the first American to make the game prominent in this country.

There are two elements of prime importance which enter into a game—chance and skill. In the latter term are included both manual and mental skill. The old fashioned game of cup and ball is an example of one requiring little beyond manual facility. In jackstraws it is a combination of skill and chance which determines the result. In checkers purely intellectual skill is operative, but in backgammon intellectual ability is combined with chance. Physicians prescribe for a patient that kind and degree of exercise which will rest the tired worker or divert the invalid.

Charles Darwin, who was always a puzzle to the scientific world on account of the immense amount of mental exertion which he could undergo, declared frankly that he owed his power of mental endurance to backgammon. This old game, now somewhat obscured by bridge and sundry other diversions of the moment, has some admirable qualities. First it demands one's strict attention at every throw of the dice and then the question of what use is to be made of the throw is an easy matter. There was even an advantage in the old way of calling out each throw in mongrel French before playing. It served to occupy the mind with easy nothings and was decidedly restful. The preponderance of chance over skill in the game was another point in its favor as a recreation pure and simple.

Promote Sociability.

Another ground on which games may be classified is the manner and amount of the social element which enters into them. Here cards have an advantage which greatly increases their popularity. The social element enters into cards in a great variety of ways. There are games admitting several players, but requiring all of them to keep silence, and others for several persons who may indulge in conversation while playing the game. There are games for two or more players, and there are numerous variations of solitaire. According to a well known medical writer, it is almost impossible to overestimate the amount of good which has been accomplished by the game of cards which is played by a single person. An invalid's waking hours are often more wearisome than his illness, and he tires of reading or is prohibited from such close application. It is then that the game of solitaire becomes of real value.

Chess Solitaires.

The severely intellectual game of chess offers also a numerous set of solitaires. Every chess column in a newspaper furnishes problems of more or less difficulty. A diagram gives the position of a few pieces toward the close of a supposed game. The party to be victor is required to checkmate in a specified number of moves. Placing the men according to the diagram, one plays for both parties, trying one's best to prevent the game from ending so soon and yet endeavoring with equal fidelity to bring it to the close required.

Chess is too intellectual ever to become popular in the strict sense of the term. It will always be a famous game in the sense that Butler's "Analogy" is a famous book, but neither of them is likely to be found on the living room table in constant readiness to contribute to the amusement of old and young. As education becomes more general the number of those who play chess increases perceptibly. Society can do little to promote its vogue, but literary culture may do everything. It is the one relaxation which the veteran Count Tolstoi has not abandoned. The pessimistic old philosopher no longer finds any comfort in reading or writing, but still seems to enjoy his daily game of chess with one of his sons-in-law. Samuel L. Clemens is an enthusiastic advocate of the recreative possibilities of playing cards, and his favorite game is euchre. Queen Alexandra and her sister, the dowager empress of Russia, are devoted billiard players. The late Grover Cleveland was fond of cribbage and never went on a fishing tour without a cribbage board in his traveling bag. Uncle Joe Cannon is a crack checker player and maintains that the ancient game of draughts is best of all. Vice President Fairbanks and his estimable wife are inclined to give whist first place among parlor games and Talleyrand was of the same way of thinking. An acquaintance once remarked to him that he had never thought it worth while to learn the game. "Not know whist, poor man—what a dismal old age you are preparing for yourself!" exclaimed the great statesman.

After all, the real and substantial value of the so called "parlor game" is that it is a means of alleviation and possible cure of those sufferings which arise from mental causes. This it does by diverting the mind without overtaxing it. It is true, unfortunately, that parlor games may be employed for gambling purposes, but there is no especial reason why they should be condemned on that account. It is an invariable rule that the best things are sometimes the very worst. [illegible] is a good servant, but a bad [illegible]. Strychnine is one of the most valuable of tonics, but it will also kill a [illegible] as quickly as it will a dog. It is true that cards have been greatly abused, and for that reason many persons interdict their use. Yet they possess a certain specific value when used properly.

When a person is tired, weighed down with anxiety and care or with a too continuous application of the mind to one set of questions his brain is apt to go on automatically, wearying itself and its master, even in sleep [illegible] during restlessness and disturbing dreams. Such a person obtains [illegible] more easily and sounder, more refreshing sleep if his mind can be diverted for an hour or two toward a different train of thought, and cards are able frequently to do the trick admirably.

There are numerous parlor games which involve some degree of muscular exercise, and others which demand vivacity and brightness in the use of language, but the main object is quite as likely to be attained through the medium of the sedentary games. The real value of a game depends on its adaptation to the individual tastes and needs of the person who plays it. It must be such as to interest him and hold his attention and yet not such as to unduly excite and fatigue him. His natural and acquired tastes, his age and habits of life, the state of his health, the causes of his fatigue or illness—all these will influence the effect that any particular game will have on him. If he be a wise man he will select his indoor pastimes as carefully as he chooses his occupation or his diet.

When a President of the United States Is Actually Elected

SPEAKING technically, the victor in the political contest which was decided last Tuesday has not yet been elected president. Those who went to the polls on that day to vote for their candidate for president did so only indirectly—they voted for electors who have yet to meet and do the real business of electing a president. No one is at all apprehensive of failure on their part to do exactly as they are expected to do.

Nor are the successful candidates for president and vice president at all anxious over the result of the meeting to be held in Washington on the second Wednesday of next February. A month previous to that the electoral colleges in the various states will have performed the technical part of the business, and the counting of the collegiate vote in the presence of congress assembled in the great hall of representatives at the national capitol will leave the matter in excellent shape for inauguration day.

Although this process of dealing with the electoral count is the supreme function of our governmental system, it attracts little attention. So far as all practical purposes are concerned, the popular interest in a presidential election is over when a safe majority for the candidates of the winning party is made apparent. Thereafter all excitement over the matter is confined to the actual participants.

In this electoral college procedure there is absolutely no variation. It is all fixed by the constitution. According to that admirable institution, "each state shall appoint (nowadays it is done by vote at the polls) in such manner as the legislature thereof shall direct a number of electors equal to the whole number of senators and representatives to which each state may be entitled in congress, but no senator or representative or person holding an office of trust or profit under the United States shall be appointed an elector. The congress may determine the time of choosing the electors and the day on which they shall give their votes, which day shall be the same throughout the United States."

The Present Method.

Of course these instructions furnished only the bare outlines, and the particulars have had to be supplied as the occasion demanded. Special acts regulating the matter and securing uniformity of action were passed by the congress in 1792, 1804 and 1887. At present the governor of each state as soon as the result of the election in his commonwealth is made certain is required to send to the secretary of state at Washington a certificate setting forth the names of the electors chosen and the number of votes cast for them and also to deliver to them triple copies, under the great seal of the state, of a similar certificate. Between now and the second Monday in January the various governors will be sending in these certificates to the department of state, and they will be filed in the archives.

This being done, the duly chosen electors of each state will meet on the designated day and perform their part in the great constitutional drama which is attracting so little attention. In most cases they will assemble at their state capitals. In the briefest manner possible each of these colleges will open its quadrennial session of an hour or so, vote for president and vice president, draw up written statements in triplicate and adjourn.

Two copies of this written statement will be sent to Vice President Fairbanks at Washington. Along with these will go copies of the triple certificate of their election, one by the hands of a special messenger appointed by a majority of each college and another by mail. A third will be deposited for safe keeping with the judge of the district in which the college assembled. This latter is a precaution against any possible loss or going astray of the other copies. Should Mr. Fairbanks fail to receive either of the other copies he will dispatch a special messenger to procure the copy in the keeping of the district judge.

An Expensive Precaution.

However, the government does not rely absolutely on its mail service. The forty-seven special messengers who will bear the tidings to the national capital will be paid for the service at the rate of 25 cents per mile. To protect himself against possible pernicious thrift on the part of these specials Uncle Sam specifies that this mileage is to be estimated in only one direction and the shortest and most ordinary route must be chosen. Even with these precautions it is rather an expensive affair, costing at least $15,000. It must be confessed that this special messenger business is somewhat behind the age.

Mr. Fairbanks is supposed to receive each of these precious documents inclosed in an official envelope from the hand of the regularly appointed messenger. Let that forever dispose of the frequent assertion that the American vice president has nothing whatever to do except to wait for something to turn up. He must also give to each bearer of the certified vote a receipt. Then Mr. Fairbanks—here a clerk might come to his relief—will place the package, unopened and with the seal intact, in a small steel safe which stands in one corner of the vice president's handsomely appointed chamber in the senate. This little safe is of exquisite workmanship and is very ornamental. It is empty most of the time, but begins to fill up shortly before the time appointed for the opening of the envelopes in the presence of congress. Only Mr. Fairbanks and his private secretary know the combination of the safe, but as an additional safeguard it is inspected thoroughly by an expert and fitted with all the modern electrical devices to prevent tampering. Armed watchmen are posted within the adjacent corridor, and the safe is guarded as if it contained the crown jewels of an empire.

On the morning of the second Wednesday in February Vice President Fairbanks and his private secretary will unlock the little steel safe and take carefully therefrom the forty-seven sealed packages. The assistant doorkeeper of the senate will be on hand to receive them. This latter official will take with him to the vice president's chamber two wooden boxes made expressly to receive the envelopes when they are taken from the safe. With these boxes in his arms he will enter the senate chamber shortly after noon.

At 12:55 precisely, no matter what the business in course of consideration, the senate will pause in its deliberation and having arranged itself in marching order, will move with dignity toward the hall of representatives. The doorkeeper of the house will announce to the assembled members the arrival of the senate, after which the doors of the great hall will be thrown wide open and the august body will enter, the assistant doorkeeper with a box under each arm, in the center, surrounded by grave and reverend senators and a cordon of capitol police in dress uniform.

HALL OF REPRESENTATIVES AND VICE PRESIDENT FAIRBANKS

Heads the Procession.

The imposing procession will be headed by the tall and imposing Mr. Fairbanks, always faultlessly attired and the very pink of sartorial perfection. The secretary of the senate will walk alongside him, and as they move forward the members and officers of the house will rise to their feet. Mr. Fairbanks will ascend the speaker's platform and seat himself in Mr. Cannon's very comfortable armchair, the latter occupying a seat at his left. When everything is ready the official who has the boxes will unlock them and then place them on the speaker's table directly in front of Mr. Fairbanks.

Opening the Packets.

After a few preliminary remarks of his own composition the vice president will open the sealed packets one by one and hand their contents to the four tellers—two senators and two representatives—who have been designated by their respective bodies. After examining the certificate closely and making sure that there can be no mistake one of the tellers will rise and announce that the eleven votes of Alabama have been cast for William Jennings Bryan of Nebraska for president of the United States.

After the first announcement there is almost always slight applause, but it is not kept up to the end of the list. Then the vice president, if he elects to follow precedent, will rise and make a statement to the effect that if there is no objection the reading of the governor's certificates will be omitted. There is never the slightest objection, and the tellers proceed to call off the votes of the various states in alphabetical order. Next to Alabama will follow in rapid succession California, Colorado, Connecticut and the others until the final Wyoming is reached.

Now the tellers will report to Mr. Fairbanks the result of the count, and that gentleman, no longer skeptical and quite regardless of his personal feelings, will rise and make a solemn and final announcement of the election. This decision will be entered on the journals of the senate and the house, and that will settle it forever. Relieved, but not unduly surprised, the joint meeting will adjourn and the men who have acquiesced in the will of the [illegible] will go their respective ways, some of them perhaps making a holiday of the remainder of that mildly eventful February day.

But that's where ten drapped his pertater. Nothin pened to him so long as he took his out agin Adam and Eve, 'cowd e wa'n't no such person as Jonah, the sun never stood still the way said it did, and that it was a blank lie about Moses partin' the n with a stammerin' rod. And he kept right cordin' to his logic till he come to Bill Stark's wife. When a man his moral breechin' off he kin anything without a qualm, and Stark was the prettiest woman in valley. 'Tain't wise to take chance with a quiet man whose un- w sets out beyond the upper one, not if his mouth is a straight, pped crack between, if his eyes air a dull blue, if he has a good stout nose and ha'r that naturally bristles. And that's a fine picture of Bill in them days. His legs were warped some, and he wa'nt what you call a gentleman, but, jumping cats, he was a man! Still, Horton couldn't take warnin' because Bill was so dull and dumb. He so p'intedly despised him for bein' that way that he finally wheedled Mary off to his shack up yonder on Blood mountain one day without so much as an umbrella to hide 'em from Bill.

"I recollect it so well, it was in the early spring. We were burnin' brush in the fields gettin' ready for the plowin' and the air was full of smoke and the faint sweet smell of wild flowers. Me and Jim Bledso were in the new ground at the foot of the mountain with Horton's shack settin' on the ridge just above. About the middle of the afternoon, as we stood by a pile of burnin' logs, we seen Horton and Mary pass up the little trail toward the shack. He was talkin' grand, as usual, we could tell by the tone of his voice, and I recollect how wild and white her face looked as she went by, as if she were in a kind of trance.

"I was all of a tremble when the door shet behind 'em, and I says to Jim:

"'Land's sake, what must we do?'

"But Jim had took one look at them two and now he was runnin' like all possessed down into the holler where Bill was also burnin' logs.

"Well, sir, in about three shakes of a sheep's tail, here come Mary's husband tearin' over the hill. His shirt was open at the neck showin' the old Adam har on his breast, his arms were swingin', his big red hands opening and shettin' like he was gettin' ready to squeeze something to death, and, by ginger, sir, he was laughin'—but it wa'n't a funny laugh! The goose bumps riz on me at the sound of it. After all said, sir, the man-killin' instinct is the strongest one a real man has. I ain't sayin' it's strongest in a highly civilized person, but such a one is apt to be shorn and shaven of some of his elements as a man. What I mean is that it takes a right smart of a savage for a fellow to keep on bein' a man under some circumstances, and as Bill Stark clum that mountain he was all savage and mighty nigh all tiger. I was so skeert thinkin' what I'd see when he reached the shack that I tried to turn round and look t'other way, but I couldn't do it. He wa'n't more'n five yards away when the door opened and Horton come out to meet him with the white fool look a man would have at such a time. I don't know whether he aimed to fight or just to argue as usual, for Bill lit on him before he could speak.

"Mister, did you ever see two men fight to kill one another with their bare fists? There ain't a more terrible sight in nature. Shootin' in a duel would look sorter finicky and ladylike by the side of it. This one I'm tellin' you of was more like a first-class dog than anything else. Them two were clamped together as tight as the hug of hate could draw 'em. They ripped and tore the earth with their heels and tore and hit one another with their teeth. Lord, sir, it makes me sick yet to think of that sight! And all this time that poor little fig of a woman inside the house didn't show her face.

"Presently I saw Stark stumble as if he were about to fall. Now, I never heard of the wronged man gettin' the worst of it in such a fight, but for all I knowed it might happen, and I yelled to Jim Bledso comin' across the field.

"'No,' sez he, as we hurried up the trail together, 'and we won't let Bill git into trouble for killin' a skunk, either.'

"Well, sir, we got there just in time to keep him from chokin' Horton to death. They were lying cramped together on the ground covered with blood, and Bill had his hand on Horton's throat.' I reached down and ketched him good and hard by the small of the back a'man can't stand that, Mister; if he had hold of the hem of the garment of the Lord, he'd flinch and let go. And with that we drug 'em apart. Bill ris and started for the house, blind mad still. Horton shet his tears, gasped, and swallowed to git his tongue back in. 'You ain't got time to faint or come to; you git up and run, you fool' sez Jim, jerkin' him to his feet and givin' him a shove.' Pappy paused, stuck the bulb of one rheumatic finger into the bowl of his pipe and commented.

"None of us knows what cowards we air till we have done something wrong and have to turn tail and run from the consequences. Just so I never saw such swiftness as that half-strangled man showed, slippin', slidin' and jumpin' down Blood mountain. 'Twan't no credit to what he called his ethics, but it was eloquent of the way a scamp feels under conviction for sin when an honest man has quoted Scripture to him with both hands.

"When I turned around Bledso was gone, but Bill was standin' in the doorway of the house lookin' at his wife. She was dressed up in her Sunday clothes, pore thing, and she was settin' by the table with her face hid in her arms on it.

"'Mary,' sez he, in a voice throbbin' still with the fury of the fight, 'you left my house for his'n. Now you shall stay here. He won't come back, but you shan't come home nor set your foot in the valley again, nor speak to anybody except that little gal Annie Lee. I'll send her up here to fetch and carry for you. We been tryin' to git a home for her, and it seems she might 'a' been yourn. So you got to take and keep her. We ain't goin' to git no divorce. We air j'ined together so long as we live and I'll see that you don't forgit it from this time.'

"It wouldn't do for a man to be perfect, Mister. He would be too unmerciful. So I thought as I stood by the door lookin' at Mary after her husband was gone. She didn't move, and it wa'n't just his anger that made her hang against the table so limp like a withered spring bough. It was her shame. A woman can't stand that kind of shame, sir. She can't buck agin it nor brazen it out as a man can. It sinks into her like p'isin and kills something in her that no man ever had. As I seen Mary droopin' lower and lower in her chair, and thought of the night comin' on, and of her up there alone with just that, I stepped in and laid my hand on her head.

"'Pore gal,' I sez.

"Then she raised up very slow and looked at me. I turned my head away. I couldn't bear it, that look of a woman's face. It shamed me as if, I'd saw a soul so naked it was sacrilegious to look. She didn't speak, and I backed out without another word, because, dang it, there wa'n't anything fitten to say.

"Well, sir, from that day Mary Stark begun to serve her long, long sentence in that lonesome house on Blood mountain, nor she never set foot in the valley, nor spoke to a soul. Bill sent the little gal up next day, accordin' to his word, but he never went near the place nor asked after his wife nor even saw her till she came to fetch him years afterward. Folks in the valley knowed what had happened, but for once they didn't meddle, not even to ask questions of the little gal when she come and went from the store to carry things. At the very beginnin' Brother Milum 'lowed he aimed to go up and see what could be done, but he had to pass by Bill's door to git to the trail up the mountain and Bill seen him.

"'I'm Mary's pastor,' sez Milum.

"'I don't keer if you were her guardian angel, you can't go!' sez he again.

"'But I'm actin',' sez Bill, spittin' in his hands and gittin' ready to h'ist Milum back over the fence the way he had come. Milum got back over himself and stood there preachin' at Bill as far as he could see him, but he didn't go up to have prayers with Mary. And once after that old Miss's Snow 'lowed as she was president of the Foreign Missionary society it was her duty to go and see what could be done for Mary in a spiritual way. There ain't nothin' meaner than a good female, Mister, that's willin' to help a fallen sister just in a spiritual way. Well, sir, in about an hour here she come back, red as a turkey cock in the face and abusin' Bill for everything she could think of. She made straight for his house, called him out, put on her specks, turned up her nose and hit in. 'Bill Stark,' sez she, 'I been up yonder to see your wife.'

"'Did she make you welcome?' sez he, not even lookin' at her. 'No, she didn't. She dassent speak to a soul but that ill-begotten child you sent up there to torment her with, and I'm here a-purpose to tell you that your conduct is that of a tyrant and a coward.'

"'I ain't keerin' what you think of my conduct, Misses Snow,' sez he, 'but so long as I live Mary's will be further from suspicion than any other woman's in this valley!' With that he walked in the house and left her standin' there with her mouth open.

"And naturally there was a right smart talk about how Mary spent her time. Some thought she'd took leave of her senses. Fox hunters on the mountain, passin' the shack late at night, heard the whirr of her spinning wheel and seen her settin' before it with wild, starin' eyes, spinnin' and spinnin' the long night through. Now and then somebody passed her in the woods lookin' so dumb and stricken that they turned their heads away in pity for her. And Prim Mayberry had seen her playin' dolls with the little gal. That was the saddest sight of all. She'd trak about to please the child, but always with that lost, confused look on her face as if she was in a bad dream. Once the little one noticed it and run to her and ketched her by the skirts and begun to cry as if she was afeered. Mary took her up and tried to pacify her. And Prim 'lowed it hurt him to see the way she cried over the child after it was asleep in her arms. He didn't understand that, and none of us knowed or could think what was in her mind.

"Mister, it used to nigh break my heart first before people quit talkin' about the way Horton looked flyin' through Brasstown in his bloody rags, and the way Bill had all but banished himself to his own house and field. The years passed and we got used to it like a pain in the side that never gets easy. I mean we got used to Bill walkin' down there in his house that seemed to rot and fall to pieces above his head, and used to the idea of Mary up there in the shack. She faded from most people's minds except now and then when somebody seen her standin' like a ghost agin the sky line high up on the shoulder of Blood mountain. She would always be holdin' a shawl over her head with one hand, shadin' her eyes with the other and gazin' down into the valley. The women claimed that it was a sign of calamity, because she'd be seen that way every time before some baby died. But of course that was just talk. The thing I noticed was the change in the looks of the shack. That little white house was like a prayer she'd published on the mountain side, so red she made it with the bugle blossoms of the trumpet vine, so pink and golden with laurels and marigold.

"Mister, it used to nigh break me heart to look at that flower garden, for I knowed it meant that the pore creature was still livin' that terrible waitin' life of hope, and I used to wonder if Bill Stark didn't understand when he looked up from his dark house door and seen all them flowers callin' and flingin' kisses at him, but if he did he never let on. He was a hard man. And I don't know how things would have turned out if something hadn't happened to turn 'em as it always does. We go along thinkin' we know where we air goin', then some thing reaches out, ketches us by the scruff of the neck, faces us about in some direction we never thought of, or flings us into the grave. So it happened with Bill. One night he walked into my house here with his under jaw hangin' loose, looked at me with a foolish baby stare and asked if I knowed where Mary was. 'I owed he'd been lookin' for her and couldn't find her. Well, sir, I didn't know what to make of it, but before I could think he was gone.

"In about an hour he come back and asked me again if I knowed where Mary was and said he couldn't find her, and went off the same as he'd done before without waitin' for me to answer. I knowed then that he'd had a stroke and was out of his head. And I knowed too that at last Mary was to have the answer to her prayer. Mister, there ain't nothin' more terrible than the answers we git to our prayers, and many a time nothin' more heart-breakin' than to realize the hope we have cherished. And I'll tell you, sir, I didn't feel like no messenger of glad tidin's as I went up the mountain that night to tell Mary her husband wanted her.

"The door was open and she was settin' before the spinnin' wheel as usual. The candle on the mantel shelf spread a circle of light in the dark above her head. Her hair was gray, her face was withered like a fine white rose that has been pressed between the leaves of a heavy book and her bosom was flat like a nun's. For a minute I couldn't speak. Somehow I couldn't think of Mary's bein' old and gray. Then I recollected that the little gal, Annie Lee, had run off long ago and got married and that Prim Mayberry's youngest boy brung Mary's things from the store now.

"When she seen me standin' there before her she stood up and looked at me as if she knowed what was comin'.

"'Mary,' sez I, 'Bill needs you. He's had a streke, and he's lookin' for you everywhere.' I turned around and started back down the mountain. I knowed she'd follow by all them years she'd obeyed the law Bill had laid upon her. And she did follow at first, then she outstripped me, and I had to run to keep up with her. There is a strange spirit of fidelity even in the most unfaithful of women if you can ever find it and break it in, and pore Mary's had been broken in this many a year.

"We found Stark teeterin' around in his house callin' her name and cryin' that he had lost her. She went straight to him, ketched hold of his arm with both hands and sez:

"'Here's Mary, Bill; you ain't lost her!'

"'You ain't my Mary,' he sez; 'her hair was black and she was young.'

"'Yes, I am,' she laughed, then she cried, still holdin' to him, 'I am your Mary, Bill, and you told Pappy you wanted me.'

"'Yes,' sez he, gropin' with one shaking hand to lay it on her head, 'I been always wantin' you.'

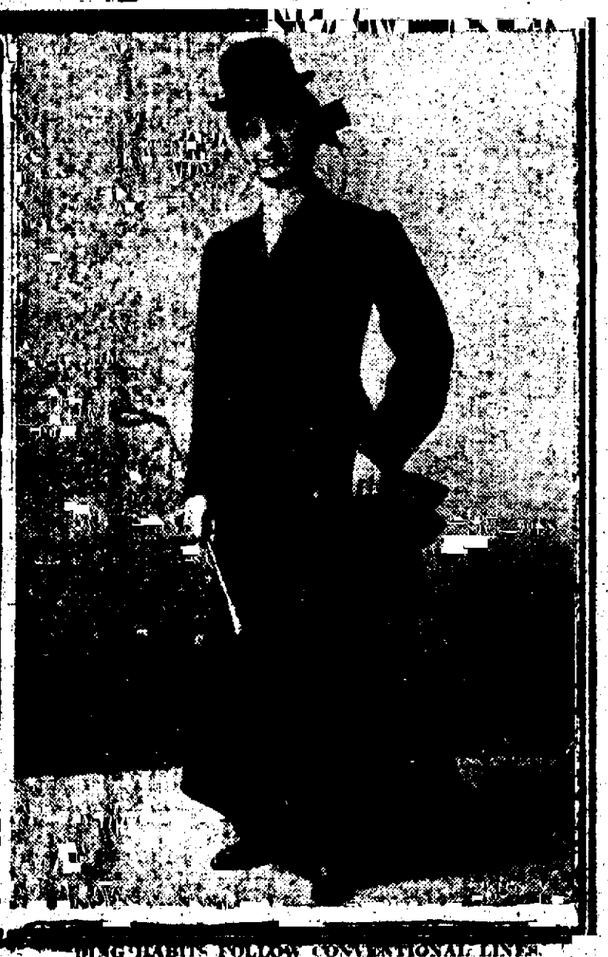

"Then she begun to laugh and to take on, and talk like she'd been off on a visit, and she'd come to fetch him home. I never see anybody look so happy. It seemed to me she was crazier than Bill, not to realize that it wan't him no longer, but just the creepin' half-dead body of a man. He was ready enough to follow her back up the mountain, and the last seen of 'em she was leadin' him and laughin' as she went."

Pappy shaded his eyes with one hand, and pointed to a tiny cabin clinging like a butterfly far up the side of Blood mountain, as he concluded.

"And they are there yet, them two whitenin' sorrows in that white house with so many flowers bloomin' agin the sides of it. Everythin' has changed somehereabouts but him and her. He just sets up there with his saggin' jaw and vacant eyes watchin' her as if he never wanted to take 'em off of her. And she never tires of nursin' him. She laughs and chatters to him all day and plays dolls with him as she used to play with the child—and she's happy. That's what breaks my heart, Mister, her happiness; that the soul of a pore frail creature should be tried till she can kiss her curse and call it her blessin'."

From the Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

One of the prettiest ceremonies that has been seen in that district for years was the "blowing in" of the Soho furnace, the oldest stack of the Jones & Laughlin Steel company, after an idleness of several months. It was all due to an old superstition among ironworkers. To insure luck, a pretty woman should fire a furnace stack that had been blown out for any cause. This superstition has resulted in a custom, and so yesterday the old stack was fired by a beautiful young woman in a manner as charming and dainty as if she had been hostess at a social function, instead of in the presence of a giant soot-begrimed furnace stack, and with the greater part of the assemblage made up of sturdy mill-workers in their shirt sleeves.

Miss Mildred MacClosky, a daughter of J. E. MacClosky, superintendent of the Soho department of the Jones & Laughlin plant, a recent graduate of Vassar, and one of Pittsburg's prettiest young women, performed the act of putting the "sacred fire" to the old stack, and as she did so a great shout of good cheer and approval went up from the onlookers.

"Let this be the flaming signal for the lighting of the fires of industry over all the broad land," she exclaimed as she applied the torch.

Now, this torch was of no ordinary sort. Its long staff was wound with red, white and blue ribbons, and festooned with knots of other colors. Miss MacClosky was accompanied by her mother and Miss Gregg. Preparations had previously been made at the "notch" of the furnace for the firing. After the torch had been applied to the oiled waste and a flame started, furnacemen came running with other torches, lighted them with the "sacred fire," and hurried from tower to tower, firing the materials in the furnace at a dozen points. The ceremony was then complete. Nothing but good luck may be expected at the furnace.

And work with Chapter One;
We learn that perfect is her hand
Eyes radiant as the sun,
Nose, all the goods, lips, ears and hair
And eyeneth, Extra C.
(We knew, when we began to read
What Chapter One would be.)

From Chapter One to Chapter Last,
Through many a lover's quarrel,
Through many an indiscretion which Could scarce be called immoral,
Yet which would jar us painfully
If we should see them acted,
(We knew, before we read the book,
They'd be thus love-distracted.)

Through Chapter Last we follow them;
We taste the clinging kiss
With them when, finally they plunge
Into a sea of bliss.
We know just how 'twould end, and yet
Clear to the end we tarried;
We trailed them to the altar, where
We saw them safely married.

Then, as their swooning spirits blend,
The author sighs and writes
"THE END."

But this is Not the end. Alas!
Imagination, apter,
Goes yet a few years further on
In the Unwritten Chapter.
Then comes a specter cynical,
With finger grim and bony,
Which points into the future, where
—Lowell Otus Reese, in Puck's Weekly.

CROSS-EYED CAT TOO MUCH FOR TARS

From the San Francisco Chronicle.

Deserted by her crew at the very moment of sailing from Seattle for the north, the fishing schooner Edris still lies at her moorings, and all because of a cross-eyed black cat. Friday the crew was making final arrangements to sail; when a yell resounded out of the hold. The sailor burst through the hatch, scrambled over the side, and made off before any one could stop him. While the others were gazing after his retreating form a yowl came from the darkness below, and a black cat appeared upon the deck. One look at the stub-tailed, green-eyed feline was enough. Every man of the crew picked up his bundle and silently departed, nor can the captain by any means lure any of them back on board.

NEW YORK'S DOOMED SIX.

From Harper's Weekly.

Somewhere on Manhattan island or in the Bronx there are walking about at this moment 60 men and women who will be murdered before the end of the next year. The phrase "at this moment" refers, of course, to the time of writing; for if by any chance the publication of these lines should be delayed, one, two or three weeks, then one, two or three of the victims who at this moment are enjoying life will have been stricken down by murderous hands before this article is generally read.

The victims will be of all classes of society, of ignorance or learning, of coarseness or refinement. You, sir or madam, who read these lines may be one of the 60 appointed by Fate to be murdered before the year has passed.

Month in, month out, five persons slain every 30 days in New York. Sometimes more than that are taken; seldom, if ever, fewer than five. So that before the chimes of Christmas shall ring ten names doubtless will have been added to the list of deaths by intentional violence.

These figures are based upon the records of homicides collected and tabulated by District Attorney William Travers Jerome of New York county. Just as a prudent farmer, knowing the probable output of his land during the coming year, would endeavor to provide enough men and horses and machinery to handle it, so he, readily foreseeing that a greater number of criminal cases than ever before will be brought to him for prosecution, seeks to add two more assistant district attorneys to the force of his office. This does not mean that there is any prospect of increase in the ratio of crime.

The population of New York county is growing at the rate of about 100,000 a year, and as the ratio of criminals to populations remains about the same from year to year, there must follow an increase of crimes to keep pace with the increase of inhabitants.

REDINGOTE EFFECTS IN VELVET.

There is a tremendous vogue for these street gowns, built in coat style yet conveying the suggestion of a carefully fitted frock, and the style promises to be a favored one all winter. Very much in its entirety is this redingote costume of chiffon velvet—and well calculated to set off the lines of a perfect figure. The trimming of gold and crochet buttons carries out the idea of severity and simple lines. Buttons down the under-arm seams are one of the striking new notions of Paris, women folk just now.

FOR SALE—REAL ESTATE.

WAKE UP.

Don't you know that times are all-fired good in Colorado Springs, and that there is every indication of a big boom in real estate here? If you don't, you are a dead one. Better wake up, get into the band wagon, follow the wise ones, and buy property now or before the big rise, which is sure to come.

SNAPS LIKE THESE

Are getting scarce. You will pay 25 per cent to 40 per cent more for the same properties in a short time, and be glad to get them.

Think of a well-built, conveniently-arranged cottage of 5 rooms and a nice summer house adjoining, and a good barn and a large lot; located on the east side, with a beautiful view of the mountains. Would you believe that such a place as this could be bought for $1,700? It can; and we have it for sale exclusively, and if you don't want to pay all cash, pay us $200 down, and the balance monthly at $20 a month. You make a clear, clean profit of $500 when you buy this property.

Or how would you like to buy a thoroughly modern 7-room cottage on North Tejon street; corner lot; cement walks all around; small barn, etc.; for $3,300. This is another snap we have that will be taken up in short order.

Or would you like a cheaper home on the west side? We have one of 5 rooms; not modern, but a very comfortable little home; located only a block from the car line and handy to reduction works, etc., that can be bought for $1,100. Owner needs money right away, and if not sold in a few days the price goes back to $1,500.

Or perhaps you would be interested in a vacant lot on the car line, east. This lot has a frontage of 50 feet and the price has been $500, but $350 buys it this week.

A Gentleman's Home

On North Weber street, far enough out to be in the best of neighborhoods, and still comparatively close in. It has 11 rooms, fully modern. The whole house is beautifully finished, but the lower floor especially so. There is a reception hall opening off from large front porch into a large living room, with alcove and cosy corners; beautiful mantel and open grate; also opens into a front parlor, with sliding doors between. This room and the living room open into a charming dining room that can be shut off from the rest of the house, or the entire lower floor can be thrown together, being splendidly arranged for entertaining. The kitchen is splendidly and completely arranged; large and of the right shape. The basement is full, cemented, partitioned for store rooms, and the best of furnaces. There are 7 bedrooms upstairs and large sleeping porches. The bath and halls are large and fully equipped; porcelain tubs and closets. The place is located on a corner, facing south and east. The price reads like there was something the matter with the property, but there isn't. It is first-class and worth much more than

GOLD-PRODUCING CAMP

MOSQUITO RANGE SAID TO BE PROMISING.

Scratching Done on Surface Only Forerunner of What Will Be Realized When Range Is Open.

LEADVILLE, Colo., Nov. 7—The Park Range group, adjoining the London, owned principally by Leadville men was visited recently by A. E. J. Whitney, one of the interested parties, who is very sanguine over the ultimate success of the enterprise. He states that work will be continued during the winter months and he is certain that they will catch the extension of the London vein on both sides. Hugo Cassidy has been at work on the Royal George claim during the summer, following several small streaks, and a few days ago had the satisfaction of seeing them come together, forming a good strong vein at the breast of the tunnel. The ore holds up to one and one-half ounces gold to the ton. The owners of the unpatented claims have been doing the annual assessment work on their holdings, and this work is nearly completed on every claim in the district. In the neighborhood of Corinne mountain several claims are being worked and some ore running five ounces gold a ton is being taken out.

In the near future Mosquito range will draw the attention of capitalists who will develop this great gold section, when it will take its place as the richest gold-bearing district in the country. The little scratching that has been done on the surface is only the forerunner to what will be realized when the range is opened by a development tunnel similar to that of the Yak. Today it presents one of the greatest tunnel sites in the state, with every assurance that immense bodies of gold ore will be opened long before it reaches its exit on the Park county side.

Breece hill and South Evans gulch are two of the busiest sections in the district and but few idle properties are to be found. The great advantage of the section is that all of the ores carry sufficient values in gold to make the owners independent of the present ruling price of silver, lead and copper. At the Fanny Rawlings an upraise has been started from the lower level, and will connect with the level above, affording plenty of good air, and then the ore body will be blocked out. When this is accomplished the daily shipments will be doubled. Some of the ore that is being taken from the lower workings runs as high as 10 ounces gold a ton, and the whole body will hold up to three ounces, with good averages in lead and silver. Many experienced miners are now of the opinion that this ore shoot in the Fanny Rawlings is the extension of the great ore bodies of the Little Johnny.

EXTENSION OF AIR PIPE LINE

Machine Drills Will Be Used to Search for Lost Ore Shoot on the Mitchell Claim.

Special to The Gazette.

CAMERON, Colo., Nov. 7—An extension of the air pipe line, owned by the Western Investment company of Victor, is being laid from the present terminal on Bull hill to the properties of the Pinnacle Gold Mining company, on the eastern slope of Bull hill, just beyond the town. The Mitchell and McClure claims of the Pinnacle company have been leased to Burrowes and associates, of Cameron, who plan to search for the lost ore shoot on the Mitchell claim with the aid of machine drills.

Special to The Gazette.

CRIPPLE CREEK, Nov. 7—With the adjustment of the insurance on the mine and buildings recently destroyed by fire at the Jerry Johnson mine on Ironclad hill, H. P. Dahl of this city, the lessee, will reconstruct the plant and resume operations. Satisfactory terms have been acceded to by the board of directors, and the life of the lease is to be extended. The lessee will therefore continue operations and will sink the shaft, already 650 feet from collar to sump, an additional 200 feet, with the least possible delay.

STOCK MARKET ACTIVE

EXCITEMENT IN SPECULATION IS MAINTAINED.

Long List of Issues Dealt in, Giving Variety and Breadth to Market. Buying Fever Apparent.

NEW YORK, Nov. 7—The excitement in the speculation was maintained today, as is witnessed by the transactions of nearly a million shares during the two hours session. The list of different issues dealt in is unusually a long one, thus testifying to the variety and breadth of the market. The dealing, in fact, gave many signs of a widespread buying fever such as breaks out in periods of a great bull market. The character of the attendance in brokers' offices and the floating discussion in the financial district, showed this also.

The digestive power of the market itself was the best illustration of this condition. Enormous realizing sales were made from time to time by the wary professional element that has come into the market to take good care of itself. But the flood of buying orders was uninterrupted and the speculative appetite gave no evidence of being appeased. It was stimulated by the roseate views of the industrial outlook contained in published reports of great orders placed for commodities, wholesale resumption by mills and sudden activity in commercial lines.

These reports were borne out in part by the more sober and detailed canvass of the commercial agencies, whose weekly reports testified fully to the revival in progress. In the case of some detailed reports of railroad orders on an enormous scale for new equipment and other outlay, there came specific denials. A lively effect on the speculation was caused by the belief that the railroads of the country were embarking upon a concerted attempt to secure higher freight rates.

The temporary injunction granted against the enforcement of the interstate commerce commission for reduction of Missouri river rates fed the conviction that the railroads are to have a freer hand in fixing charges. Some effect on prices was made in the last hour by the extended realizing sales, but new points of strength were developing when the market closed in great animation. The sharp reduction in the banking surplus was predicted before the market closed, although the statement was not published until afterward.

The bond market was active and strong. Total sales, par value $5,240,-000. U. S. bonds were unchanged on call for the week.

WHEAT MARKET STRONG

DAMAGE REPORTS RUN PRICES TO HIGHER POINT.

Final Quotations Show Net Gains of 1 1-8 to 1 3-8c—Corn, Oats and Provisions Also Strong.

CHICAGO, Nov. 7—Fears that the entire winter wheat crop has been seriously damaged by drouth caused an advance of more than 1c per bushel in wheat prices on the local exchange today, and final quotations showed net gains of 1⅛@1⅜c. Corn, oats and provisions were also strong.

Anxiety among wheat traders concerning the new-sown crop was aroused by the Ohio state report, which was made public yesterday and which showed a serious deterioration in the growing crop in that state, owing to lack of moisture. A local crop expert, in a report published today, maintained that the Ohio report was only a forerunner of many similar pronouncements, and the December government report would show that new southern wheat in Indiana, Michigan, Illinois, Tennessee and Kentucky was in the poorest condition recorded in many years. It was also claimed that the condition of the crop in Missouri, Kansas and Oklahoma would be found to be very low. As a result of these advices and owing to sharp advances at the principal European centers, demand for wheat here was urgent all day and prices advanced steadily throughout the entire session. Demand for cash wheat here showed some improvement and prices were a trifle higher for the best grades, while low grades were rather weak. Minneapolis also reported good demand for the cash grain. The market closed strong at almost the best prices of the day, with December at $1,01⅝ and May at $1 05.

Local bulls were active bidders for corn today, and as a result the market was firm all day. The market closed strong with prices up ⅝c to ⅞@⅞c, with December at 61⅝@61⅞c, and May 62@62⅛c, almost the top point of the season.

Oats were firm on fair demand by cash houses. The market closed firm with prices ⅛c to ⅜@½c higher. Final quotations on December were 42⅝@42⅝c and on May at 50½@50⅝c.

Provisions derived moderate firmness from the strength of grain, shorts being buyers in the early session. The bulk of trade was in lard. The close was firm at gains of 2½@5@10c.

ORE BODY IS IN SIGHT

GOOD SHOWING IN THE GILLILAND LEASE.

Property Is to Be Equipped for Rapid, Heavy Operations.—Morrissey Lease is Active.

RAWHIDE, Nev., Nov. 7.—An ore body of promising mineral possibilities is showing in the bottom of the Gilliland lease shaft on the estate of the Rawhide Mining company. At a depth of 65 feet the shaft is in quartz well filled with mineralization, associated with which is considerable free gold. The entire deposit breaks an average of $15 a ton, and by careful sorting it would be possible to conserve a small tonnage of shipping ore. It is not the intent of the management to so do however, but to hold the entire product of the dump until such time as the milling plant of the Rawhide Mining company is in commission. In the meantime the main working shaft is to be equipped with a powerful hoisting plant and is to be lowered to a depth of 150 feet, where will be crosscut and drifted upon the ledge now showing at the 65-foot point. The Gilliland ore body is unquestionably a portion of the huge dyke which traverses the north end of the camp from the Westover leasehold on the northeast to the Silver King leasehold on Coalition ground, 2,000 feet to the southwest.

At the Morrissey lease on the Rawhide Mining company's acreage, the main working shaft is well below the 150-foot level on its way to the 300-foot point, where is to be crosscut and proved up the same ledge exposed in the upper workings. This will afford a stoping area extending from a depth of 300 feet practically to the surface. The average width of the main Morrissey ledge is 14 feet, with values varying from $10 to $30 in gold to the ton.

Development of the leasehold of the Emir Regent company on the estate of the Rawhide Rector Mines company is soon to be facilitated by means of a powerful hoisting plant. The four blocks held under lease tenure by the Emir Rawhide offer out of ordinary possibilities in the way of ore tonnage, as they are traversed for a length of 400 by two strong and well mineralized ledges. About 60 feet above the point where the main working shaft is being sunk, is exposed at the surface a ledge, that assays high in both silver and gold, while to the west of the shaft there has been opened up at the surface for a length of 70 feet a vein which carries a very promising gold content. The silver ledge shows a width of 14 feet and carries a 20-inch section of $156.30 to the ton ore. Quite a tonnage of that grade has been sacked. This ledge is to be crosscut at a depth of 100 feet through the medium of the main shaft. The present depth of the shaft is 56 feet. The west crosscut from the 100-foot level will open up the gold ledge before referred to. That success in the way of pay ore will reward the company's effort is apparently indicated by the fact that the outcrop yields assays of from $66 to $70.80 to the ton. These values obtain in stringers of quartz varying in width from three to eight inches.

Adjoining the Rector ground and carrying the continuation of both, the silver and gold ledges which obtain on the Emir Regent blocks, is the estate of the Royal Regent company. Plans are now well under way for the extensive development of the acreage by means of a deep main working shaft. Until quite recently the Royal Regent company was almost totally without funds with which to prosecute mining research, but a large block of treasury shares is now being placed in the middle west with which to conserve a working fund.

AN EMPIRE DINNER GOWN

THIS dinner gown follows the prevailing Empire Idea. The material used is one of the soft satins: and the skirt, while circular, is cut rather fuller at the bottom than some. The trimming is of embroidery done in floss on a ground of gold or silver filet net, and the girdle falls nearly to the hem.

Work and Play for the Idle Hour

WHEN using this printed design from the paper the directions are as follows:—

If the material used is very sheer, the easiest way is to lay it over the design, which will show through plainly, and draw over each line with a hard, sharp lead pencil. If your linen is heavy buy a piece of impression paper, the kind that does not rub off, lay it on your material, place the design over it and trace with a hard pencil. You will find the design neatly transferred and ready to be embroidered.

In transferring a design when only one part is given fold your linen so that the two right sides come together. Between these two sides insert two sheets of impression paper, placing the wrong sides of paper toward each other, then place your design on the folded material and draw each line firmly with a hard, sharp pencil. You will find that both sides of the design are produced on the linen.

A skirt panel to match the shirtwaist of last week is drawn for today. It may be done in the shadow embroidery on sheer material, with the flowers and scrolls in the fagoting stitch worked on the wrong side of the material and the stems in the outline stitch on the same side.

On heavy linen the flowers and scrolls can be embroidered in the solid satin stitch, with the dots as eyelets and the stems in the outline stitch.

PARTIES FOR GROWN-UPS

By Mary Dawson

WHEN card games for any reason are not desired and a musical program equally out of the question, the entertainment at which only adults will be present is apt to prove an undertaking for the hostess. The puzzle is to find some form of amusement which will really hold the attention of the guests without romps or dancing.

A pad and pencil contest, entitled "Husbands and Wives," solved this problem for a hostess of original ideas not long ago. To copy her plan in detail make from pad paper and cardboard as many little notebooks as there will be ladies and gentlemen present. Cover the books with figured calico and decorate the outside with the title in gilt lettering.

Before distributing the books let the women select buttons from one basket, the men taking theirs from another receptacle. All the buttons in one basket have mates in the other. Those whose buttons match are partners for the game. Each couple then receives a booklet and three-quarters of an hour are allowed for working out the replies, which is done in partnership. The prize could be a book relating the stories of famous love affairs.

A suggestion for the question series is given below:—

1. What husband of striking personal appearance was wedded and bereft an unusual number of times? (Bluebeard.)

2. What historic English husband is thought by some to be the original of the preceding? (Henry the VIII).

3. What wife, during the long absence of her husband, spun a famous web? (Penelope)

4. What couple whose names come down to us in a jingle were exceedingly congenial of taste? (Jack Sprat and wife)

5. What two poets made an ideal love match? (Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett)

6. What wife in Dickens constantly refused to desert her husband in his difficulties? (Mrs. Micawber).

7. What philosopher had an extremely cross spouse? (Socrates, whose wife, Xantippe, has bestowed her name upon the entire race of scolds)

8. What wife perished in a peculiar way through her curiosity? (Lot's wife)

9. What ancient Roman declared that his wife must be above even suspicion? (Julius Caesar)

11. What woman's name is handed down to us as a model of wifely patience? (Patient Griselda.)

12. What lover won a rich and beautiful wife by singing a song? (Walther in The Meistersinger)

Search for Helpmates.

A search where celebrated husbands scour the parlor for their little known wives is also diverting and is considerably more intellectual than it sounds.

Our Presidents and their better-halves make a splendid selection, for while the names of the nation's chief-executives are familiar to every schoolboy, how many of us can name the women who shared their elevation and their fame?

Give the gentlemen as they enter the room tiny American flags on each one of which is written the name of some past occupant of the White House chair. The women receive similar flags with the names of Presidents' wives written on them. Guests are instructed to form into couples by matching the flags. As the entertainer gives no information on the subject and books of reference are banished from the scene, these directions are more difficult to follow than they sound.

The names of the Presidents' wives are given here for the convenience of the entertainer, the bachelors of the group, James Buchanan, being omitted.

George Washington (Martha Custis), John Adams (Abigail Smith), Thomas Jefferson (Martha (Wayles) Skelton), James Madison (Dolly (Payne) Todd), James Monroe (Eliza Kortwright), John Quincy Adams (Louisa C. Johnson), Andrew Jackson (Rachel Robards), Martin Van Buren (Hannah Hoes), William H. Harrison (Anna Symmes), John Tyler (Letitia Christian), James K. Polk (Sarah Childress), Zachary Taylor (Margaret Smith), Willard Fillmore (Abigail Powers), Franklin Pierce (Jane M. Appleton), Abraham Lincoln (Mary Todd), Andrew Johnson (Eliza McCardle), U. S. Grant (Julia Dent), Rutherford B. Hayes (Lucy W. Webb), James A. Garfield (Lucretia Rudolph), etc.

At the end of half an hour the different couples (as they suppose themselves to be) present themselves to the hostess. If they are correctly matched they are eligible to draw for the prize.

The same contest can be arranged with the wives of authors, as Robert Browning (Elizabeth B[illegible]), [illegible] B. Shelley (Mary Godwin), etc. Or with historical or myth[illegible] as Hector and Andromache, [illegible] VI and Margaret of Anjou.

IMOGENE — The [illegible] stitch, which has the French knot attached, is used in the center of flowers to form the [illegible] and [illegible] is made by bringing the silk out at the point where the end of the stamen should be in the flower and twisting the [illegible] around the needle for a French knot.

The needle is then inserted where the [illegible] is to be formed at the other end, and pulled through, which will make the stamen and [illegible] a single stitch.

Strength, Health and Beauty

Indian Clubs for Exercise

By Harriet Coates

No names of firms or addresses will be given to correspondents. All communications will be answered in these columns; none by mail.

As a developer of muscles and as a producer of harmonious movements, there is no better means than a systematical, reasonably vigorous indulgence in exercising with Indian clubs.

Of course, it will be readily understood that it will not suffice if one simply swings the clubs to and fro an indefinite number of times. There are regular exercises to be carried out minutely.

For the majority of beginners, who have not gone through a previous course of training, I would suggest that a pair of clubs weighing from twelve to sixteen ounces each will be of sufficient weight to start with. It is far better to use a pair that can be easily managed at first than one that would tend to exhaust you after a short while, for it is the continuous exercise from which the most benefit is derived and as the strength increases a heavier pair may be substituted.

I again call attention to the fact that only by perseverance and a systematized, religiously observed practice the desired strength and development will be obtained.

Another essential precaution learners have to take is not to strike the clubs together, and to grasp the handles properly and firmly. Carelessness in this respect will prevent the attainment of a graceful style of swinging the clubs and thus produce angular, awkward movements instead of harmonious ones.

The movements required are simple enough, but not so as to be tedious. On the contrary, a continual interest is experienced when, after having mastered the simpler ones, you progress to more complicated exercises, or create new ones.

Before beginning practice all tight clothing should be removed, in order to facilitate the freedom of movements and to produce better and quicker results.

I would advise that you place yourself in front of a long mirror, reflecting your whole figure, if possible, as this will mercilessly reveal to you any lack of grace demonstrated when swinging the clubs. The result is obvious. You will try to overcome this awkwardness, as well as correct any other shortcoming which would certainly have been overlooked had you not seen it with your own eyes.

Much depends on the position taken when exercising. Stand perfectly erect, chest thrown out, body well braced, with the feet slightly apart, grasping the handles of the clubs close to the ball, giving free, unhampered play to the wrists and endeavoring earnestly to attain an easy and graceful style.

Start with the hand opposite the chest, grasp the end of the club easily, with the elbow at the side, the knuckles out and the club extended vertically. Every movement begins with this position.

If but one club is used the other arm should be allowed to rest at the side. (Compare Illustration No. 1)

It is advisable that beginners start exercising with one club for awhile and after adopt the two.

The position for the second exercise is demonstrated in illustration No. 2, and is the same as the preceding one. It had better be practiced with one club at a time.

When the club reaches a point opposite the right leg, twist the wrist suddenly, moving your elbow to the front, raising the club toward your right ear. Then extend the club at arm's length to the right, allowing it to drop to the floor, then throw the club out parallel to the extent of the arm, swinging it in a circle to the left side in front of the body, and when it reaches the left shoulder bring the club to the position above the head.

This exercise is not at all difficult, and should be repeated an equal number of times with both arms.

The motion in the third exercise is a fundamental basis for a good many more or less complicated exercises. I would advise to practice it thoroughly, first with one hand and then with the other.

When you start the circle, give the club a twirl, and the momentum of its weight will carry it around.

At the completion of the circle give the wrists a twirl, and bring the club over the shoulder, assuming the first position, and bring the clubs in front of the breast.

Practice with the right and left arm alternately until you become exhausted, but do not keep it up until exhausted. Rest for a few moments, and then resume exercising with renewed force.

The fourth exercise illustrated is one to be indulged in with both clubs, and will be found not only a good general exercise but also an exceptionally good movement for limbering up and fortifying the spine.

Begin action by bringing the clubs well up in front of the breast, palms turned inward, elevate them over the head, throwing them backward, making the hands sink well back of the neck as far as you can to the extent of the arms, curving the body backward. Repeat this four or five times in succession, until not the slightest difficulty is experienced in accomplishing this exercise smoothly and without an obstacle.

The number of times to repeat the motions in exercising should always be governed by one's physical condition. Refrain from being over-zealous in your desire for perfection, for that is the cause of many a woman's discontinuing exercising. A reaction is sure to come in the shape of stiffness caused by nothing but over-exertion, and in consequence the blame is shifted to the exercise, and it is considered harmful, when in reality it is the most beneficial thing known of, calling into action weak and inactive muscles that lack proper development, or have relaxed on account of insufficient use.

Utilizing the Mattress Cover.

When discarding or making over an old mattress do not throw away the ticking. Make arrangements with the man who does the work to return the cover.

Rolling Is Beneficial

As long as the fat woman is rolling she should do it in the right way. Such vigorous exercise with bad instead of good results would be tragic.

Rolling on a bed will not answer; the hardness of a floor is essential. As one amused man says, "He supposes the cure is on the thin theory of putty rolling to flatten it!"

It is not much good to get thin if at the same time one takes up all sorts of microbes into the system. Even if the floor is your own, and supposedly clean, spread a sheet before beginning to roll.

Go over and over to the far side of this sheet, then roll back. See to it that the right side of the sheet is marked, or you might as well take to the uncovered floor after the first day's rolling.

Do not roll too vigorously at first or your enthusiasm for the new thinning method will not be worked. After the first day's trial you will think age has caught you at last.

As most stout women have sensitive flesh, try to save it from bruising. If the arms are held above the head as you roll one can protect the flesh from hard knocks or too much pressure.

Roll before and not after the bath. If you reverse this order you will feel that your cleanliness is wasted.

Do not expect to lose your thirty or forty pounds by rolling one morning and stopping for ten to come. Perseverance will be harder in this form of thinning than in many others, but the results pay.

Do not expect that the propaganda of your rolling cure will be received seriously; you may point with pride to lost pounds, but the thin friend of vivid imagination will scream with mirth at the idea.

"THAT RED NOSE" BY HEBE

No names of firms or addresses will be given to correspondents. All communications will be answered in these columns, none by mail.

"I DECLARE my nose is always red," complained a girl the other day. "In Summer it is a beacon of light from sunburn, and in Winter it turns so red in the cold that I am ashamed to look at my reflection in the mirror."

Her remark is doubtless echoed by many women, but it seems a pity to blame the lovely, cool, bracing days of Autumn for such an unfortunate state of countenance, for which the weather is not entirely responsible.

As a matter of fact if the frost does tip the nose with color it also imparts a healthy glow to the cheeks, or should do so if the circulation is good and the woman in question is dressed correctly.

The nose is a very much abused organ at all times, but particularly when the owner is suffering from what is commonly called "a cold in the head"—a complaint which is generally prevalent at this season and for which one usually receives very little sympathy.

Meanwhile, the unfortunate nose is twisted and blown until it becomes swollen and sensitive inside and out from rough handling.

Soft handkerchiefs, preferably of silk, or, better still, soft old rags, which may be burned after use, should always be used for a cold. Some people use the Japanese rice paper handkerchiefs upon such occasions, and these are sanitary because they are afterwards destroyed.

Still, in every house handkerchiefs too old and torn for every-day use should be laid away for use while there is a cold in the family.

Never touch the nostril with a soiled or coarse handkerchief when it is [illegible], or [illegible] scratches will result and cause both discomfort and unsightly irritation.

The veil also has much to do with the wintry nose, for the rough mesh tends to irritate the tip of the nose against which it rests, and in cold weather the moisture from breathing collects on the veil, in freezing it chaps the nose and often the chin and cheeks if it is drawn too tight.

Nor should the nose become permanently and abnormally red if the diet is well regulated and the clothing not too tight.

The clothes have a great deal to do with both the appearance of the skin and the expression of the face, especially in the Autumn season, when the dampness and chill air lead to colds and other Autumnal ills.

When the nose appears red and the eyes dull and puffy, or the extremities are cold without any of the usual symptoms of rheumatism or catarrh it usually means that the circulation is at fault.

And then remember, please, that tight stays and too snugly fitting collars may be causing the mischief.

If looser clothing, plenty of good exercise and absence of rich food do not reduce the inflamed member, nor a gentle massage with an application of a cooling cream, consult a physician, for the continued redness may indicate internal disorder of some sort.

Indigestion, gout or inflammation of the mucous membrane will cause this very undesirable condition, a red nose. In either case the cause must be learned and removed before a better condition can be looked for.

The doctors will tell you not to blow the nose too hard, for fear of injuring the delicate lining of the interior. Nosebleed is sometimes caused by too strenuous blowing, and the little veins on the upper lip at the openings of the nostrils may be permanently enlarged and reddened by the same means.

Children are very apt to disfigure their noses as well as their mouths by constant handling, and this fault must be corrected as soon as detected.

Enlarged pores make their first appearance on the nose, and a few drops of benzoin and cold water for the face will help to reduce this condition, if the skin is kept scrupulously clean.

Then comes the ugly little frown, and how few people one sees, either young or old, without it, in a more or less exaggerated degree. Some will inform you they have had it from infancy.

Alas! for that frown. We term it variously, "Trolley car face," "Motor face" and soon, no doubt, it will be "Subway frown" and "Aeroplane expression," when airships become the ordinary mode of travel.

Loose ends of hair have much to do with facial expression and the present fad for hair nets ought to help in removing that pucker between the eyebrows.

A frown may come from defective vision, but it is very often a matter of habit.

Those who require glasses should pocket their pride and wear them, for of the two evils (wrinkles or glasses) the glasses are decidedly the least. In fact glasses are quite becoming to some people, while the frown lines and wrinkles are never becoming.

The lines between the eyes make a face look positively savage and rob it of all the sweetness it ever possessed. Hence it is most important to learn not to frown.

When walking in a very strong light from reflection of water or snow it is advisable to wear slightly smoked glasses, and always practice facial repose.

To eliminate the frown use a massage cream, and place the middle fingers of the left hand firmly across the forehead over the eyes and with the middle finger of the right hand placed across the lines work in the cream with an upward and downward stroke. The light pressure on the downward stroke.

Before retiring spread the lines slightly and place a piece of court plaster over them. Whenever possible wear the court plaster during the day. It will be a little gentle reminder every time one frowns or raises the brows. In this way one soon becomes conscious of raising the brows and frowning and will soon better control of the face.

It is a great accomplishment to get control over the muscles of the face. Watch some people laugh. Not one in a hundred have a free, hearty, genuine laugh.

One will pucker up the eyes until they are nearly closed, another will bring great lines at the side of the mouth, others will pucker the lips in an effort not to wrinkle the face and forget they are making an ugly wrinkled lip. Others again will wrinkle the nose.

Watch a child three or four years old. They will laugh without making but a very few lines, providing a foolish mother has not taught them to make ugly faces.

It is not necessary to have a face void of expression in order to prevent lines. It is, however, necessary to learn how to use and not abuse the face.

When laughing, if the laugh is genuine, the eyes will light up, the mouth should be open slightly, the lips will have free play, not puckered or stretched to such an extent as to make dozens of lines.

Just by a little care and practice the beauty which nature has endowed could be retained almost indefinitely.

Vanity you say? No, it is a duty as well as a privilege to make the best of oneself and show our appreciation of the blessings we have received.

Shampooing Gray Hair.

Mrs. M. Matson:—Gray hair is like a white cloth—it becomes soiled quickly. Perspiration turns it yellow and makes it sticky. To keep it in good condition it is necessary to have it shampooed every ten days. In the rinsing water put a little good blueing, just enough to make the hair look white.

About the Hair.

Mrs. S. E. D.:—In the first place do not use borax. In many cases it has been known to make the hair fall. I fear you do not stick to one tonic long enough to have it do you any good. Massage cannot help but improve the hair if properly given. Place the fingers firmly on the scalp under the hair. Start at the hair line just in front of the ears, and with a rotary motion work up to the top of the head. Slide the fingers down just back of the starting point and work up to the top of the head and repeat until the entire head has been gone over.

With each rotation of the fingers you must move the scalp and not simply rub the fingers over the hair. Apply the tonic before the massage. If you persevere you can overcome the oily condition and stop the hair from falling, unless there is some constitutional trouble. In that case consult your physician. Get plenty of sleep, and if nervous try a nerve tonic.

Sage leaves can be either fresh or dried. You should simply make a strong tea. Tar is good in tonic to darken gray hair. Beautiful hair is the gift of nature, but it can be cultivated to a great extent.

Hair Tonic.

Corrosive sublimate	10 grains

Superfluous Hair.

Miss H. M. D.:—Please read note at top of column. There are a number of depilatories that can be used without injury to the skin. Any reliable druggist could advise you which one to use.

Pretty Hands.

School Girl:—Pretty hands are the free gift of nature and cannot be made to order. However, you can improve your hands very much by constant care. Always use a bland soap. Dry them thoroughly whenever bathed; loosen the cuticle every day; keep the nails clean and well shaped. Be manicured once a week. When the hands get rough or chapped bathe them in warm water before retiring and apply the following:

Wax Velvet.

Pure honey	4 ounces
Glycerine	1 ounce
Rectified spirits	1 ounce
Citric acid (pure)	3 drams
Essence of ambergris	6 drops

Superfluous Hair.

Jennie L. and M. L.:—If you will read the notice at top of column you will understand why your request is not granted.

Letter Not Answered.

Mrs. Anne Marshall:—Your letter was answered, but owing to our limited space it is impossible to print the answers as soon as we would like to give them.

Mouth Wash.

Salicylic acid	120 grains
Tincture of myrrh	2 ounces
Tincture of soap bark	2 ounces
Cologne	4 ounces
Glycerin	1 ounce
Alcohol	6 ounces
Tincture of orris	2 ounces

Burns and Scalds.

Mrs. M. T.:—This lotion is very good for a burn. Where there are children it is always wise to be prepared for accidents.

Creosote	15 drops
Cocaine hydrochlorate	10 grains
Lime water	½ pint
Linseed oil	½ pint

Vaucaire Tablets.

Mrs. J. L., M. L. and Lesbia:—The Dr. Vaucaire tablets to develop the bust can be purchased at any drug store. They will not affect the heart. Directions come with the tablets.

Hair Between the Eyes.

Yes E. M. P.:—You should have the hair between the eyes removed with the electric needle. It would not return, and a depilatory would be very hard to use successfully on so small a place.

To Reduce Size of Nose.

Tattle L.:—Plastic surgery is the only means by which you can reduce the size of your nose. Ask your family physician to direct you to a good surgeon. If he does not do that kind of work, he will be likely to know someone that does. You want to be very sure of having a skillful operator.

Where to Purchase Genista.

Mrs. A. B.:—Genista is a well-known drug and should not be at all difficult to procure. If your druggist does not have it in stock he can very easily order it for you from a wholesale druggist.

Address Required.

Edward P.:—I will ask you to read the notice at the head of the column; there you will see that names and addresses of firms are not given in the paper. If you consult the advertising columns you may be able to find the information you ask.

Henna Paste.

S. D.:—It is the ordinary blueing that is to be mixed with the henna paste, the lighter the shade desired the shorter the time required for leaving the paste on. It takes from twenty minutes to a half hour to produce a light brown. It is a harmless dye and usually lasts about one month.

Itching Skin.

Useful Aids to Beauty

The Shower Bath and Its Effect.

Not everyone is strong enough to stand a shower bath, but when taken properly it has a tonic effect.

The best test whether it is beneficial or harmful is whether one is in a glow afterwards or feels creepy for several hours.

The shock is not good for anyone with a weak heart, and no one who is not well should use a shower except by the advice of a physician.

As a rule, the best time for a cold shower is on rising in the morning, the system is strongest then.

Do not stay under the shower too long, a minute is quite long enough, unless one has exceptional strength.

Never take a cold shower when chilly. The cold feeling is a sign that your physical condition is not up to the mark.

Follow a shower by hard rubbing and by a few physical exercises. Some women go back to bed for five minutes after the bath before dressing. The rest overcomes any shock from the cold water.

Do not stoop forward unduly in taking a shower. It is not good for the spine to receive the first shock of cold at the base of the brain or between the shoulders.

Exercise for Invalids.

When one is confined to bed for a long time it is necessary to give the invalid some form of simple exercise. If cost is not an objection, this is best managed by a trained masseuse.

She should come every other day or oftener, as the doctor advises. Deep massage will stir up all the organs and prevent sluggishness.

Careful rubbing, alternating with gentle pinches to start circulation, is a good substitute for massage, with the advantage that it can be done by an amateur nurse.

Care must be taken not to permit an invalid to overtire in her zeal for exercise. The best time to take it is two hours after eating. It must continue but a few minutes at a time and any vigorous movements of health should be forbidden.

The Heavily Scented.

Nothing is more vulgar than to use a heavy scent. It stamps a woman at once as lacking in refinement.

The dainty girl does not use perfumes directly; if she likes them at all they must be faint, elusive and individual.

The best way to secure this elusive fragrance is to use sachets in closets, bureau drawers and boxes. They may be made of orris root, mixed with any desired sachet.

When a certain scent is adopted by a girl it is well to cling to it. To smell one day of [illegible] and the next be reeking with [illegible] is both bad taste and unfashionable.

Instead of wearing them, sachets concealed in the [illegible] the up-to-date girl will keep her [illegible] in a box that is heavily perfumed; this gives that faint, intangible perfume to the clothes that is constantly a mark of daintiness.

Besides being bad taste to use a heavy scent, it is [illegible] is injurious to the health. [illegible]

A Nerve Rest for the Baby.

We hear [illegible] nowadays, but [illegible] said of giving the baby a [illegible].

Imagine how you would like to be danced or joggled or made to show off in all your waking hours. Yet that is the fate of the average baby from the time it is big enough to take notice.

Is it any wonder that children develop Saint Vitus dance, or get inflammation of the brain, not to speak of [illegible] disorders? What they need is nerve rest.

The more you leave the baby the less you treat it as a plaything, the more comfort it and you will have in years to come.

Make a practice of keeping the baby by itself the greater part of the day. It is surprising how soon, with proper training, the child will be content to lie in its crib, playing happily with a single toy or just looking around.

Every time the brain of a very young child is excited it is that much nervous energy used up from the store that is to last a lifetime.

That Brown Line Again.

The girl who has been struggling vainly during the Fall with the [illegible] line on the neck, the result of too much sun or too tight collars, should not despair until she has tried pumice stone.

If rubbing the stone and soapy water on the neck each time it is washed is too hard for the skin, try mixing powdered pumice with grease.

Put cold cream on a piece of fine chamois, cover it with powdered pumice and rub it lightly but firmly on the neck. Finish the process by washing with a lather of fine white soap.

Feather Novelties on Winter Hats

By Mme. Cullinane

THE contest between feathers and flowers as a trimming for Fall and Winter hats has resulted in a very pronounced inclination toward the former.

Plumage of all kinds is used in abundance, from the feathers of the barnyard fowl up to the most exotic velvet birds and colibris.

The favorite articles for trimming hats of the very dressy order are ostrich, heron and paradise plumage; great, big swaths and mounts of it, which appear very simple, but are in reality the most expensive trimming to be had, and the one most in conformity with the dashing outlines of the large, picturesque new shapes of velvet, silk, or fine felt.

Moreover, there are exquisite new touffes, aigrettes and rosette effects, also made of the plumage just quoted, which are also an admirable trimming for the [illegible] elaborate hats.

Quills of unheard-of length, and [illegible], and wings are also shown in profusion, and [illegible] of the most exquisite as well as the simplest order. They [illegible] in all the new shades of antique gold, copper, metallic and dull blue, mauve, gray, taupe, soft green and fraise, and in lovely color combinations, and may be combined with velvet, soft ribbon, or used as the sole trimming of a hat.

The crown band of feathers is one of the most admired new novelties, and is extremely chic, reminding very strongly of the headgear worn by Indian chiefs. It is shown in the first illustration, decorating a stunning hat of pale lava gray French felt. The shape consists of a broad brim, bent down a little at the right side, and slightly raised at the left, and a tall, straight crown of great circumference.

Around this latter the feather band is [illegible] so as to surmount the crown in height. It terminates at the right side under a very full, fan-shaped ornament, which is made of the same coque feathers that form the band, and shows the same tone of deep mauve as this. A soft torsade of velvet in the shape of the felt is laid about the lower part of the brim, holding the feather trimming in position, and it is overlaid with an exquisite band of fancy galloon of chenille in the palest tones of mauve and dull gray, intersected at regular intervals with large flower motives, also in chenille, the centre of which is formed by large amethysts.

The model demonstrated in illustration No. 3 is also characterized by an [illegible] attractive trimming of [illegible] plumage, an [illegible] fan-shaped touffe of tiny [illegible] in very dull taupe, [illegible] with long "flou" aigrettes of goura in a soft, pale tone of blue [illegible].

The hat which this trimming decorates is a large, [illegible] shape of soft, deep taupe colored beaver, with a tall, slender conical crown, and a broad brim of even width [illegible] its circumference, dented in the centre front in Marie Stuart effect, and drooping all around.

Under this arrangement the fancy plumage is [illegible] so that it extends over both crown and brim in perfectly horizontal position.

The crown is made to appear more voluminous and taller than it actually is by the manner in which the trimming is arranged. This consists of a pair of large, broad stiff wings in light copper tones, which are fastened near the top of the crown at the centre front and the right side, extending far beyond it in every direction. A wide, folded draped section of velvet in the shade of the facing is laid over the plumage carelessly, covering a great portion of it, and, in connection with two large ornamental pins of copper [illegible] pearl form a most charming contrast with the light tones of the wings.

The crown is draped in beret style with softly crushed velvet in dull Rouen blue, but only very little of this drapery is visible, the trimming being very voluminous. It consists solely of a wide straight band of soft marabout in the shade of the velvet, which is finished with tall, straight strands of heron aigrettes in the same soft tones, falling softly over the top of the crown and producing an [illegible] attractive new contour.
